WHY WE FALL IN LOVE

Science Studying the Mysterious Secret of the Vibratory Force Which Plays on the Heart-Strings of Men, Women and Animals.

"Will science teach us how to find the basic note of an individual, so that we may play upon his heart-strings as we would upon the strings of a harp, and control his emotions, his affections, his good and bad impulses, and shape his destiny?"

By Prof. Garrett P. Serviss.

THAT vibration is the basis of all active phenomena is a doctrine warranted by scientific results. Before inquiring if it be true that each human being possesses a fatal "basic note," as has been claimed, let us first examine some of the facts of which this theory is the outgrowth.

If these are facts indicated as some claim, by recent scientific progress, then we have at last the long-sought explanation of many mysterious influences that, from time immemorial, have governed human action, and controlled the lives of men and women; wrecking them in many cases, leading on to the most dazzling fortune in others. The strange power of music is thus explained on a scientific basis, and the legends of Orpheus, who was said to charm animals and even trees as well as men, and of the Sirens who lured mortals to destruction. Moreover, we see that the same resistless power is still in the world, and if modern science could but learn to direct it the possibilities of human control over terrestrial affairs would become almost limitless.

Instantly it becomes apparent that the great mystery of love finds its explanation in the vibratory theory. The woman who draws to her the heart and soul of a devoted man does so because she has unconsciously found his basic note. Loveless marriages are explained because there is no harmony of vibration between husband and wife. The woman who has received attentions from hundreds of men with indifference suddenly, perhaps in a moment, finds a man who instantly exercises an irresistible control over her whole existence—this man is the one who has found her basic note.

But while it is easy to see the tremendous importance of the application of this new theory to love, yet the complexities of the human heart are so great that it also becomes apparent that a very considerable research must be necessary before science can understand it thoroughly. If, for instance, a young woman strikes the basic note and wins the affections of her lover, what is to explain the fading away and final loss of her powers as, unfortunately, certainly sometimes happens? And will science, if the relation between the human affections and the vibratory theory are fully demonstrated, be able to teach us how to find the basic note of an individual, so that we may play upon his heart-strings as we would upon the strings of a harp, and control his emotions, his affections, his good and bad impulses, and shape his destiny?

All this is fascinating and interesting and well worth further research and study. Let us, then, see how much reasonable certainty science can find that underlies it all.

Some years ago in Paris I witnessed, on a large scale, an illustration of the singular power of rhythm to control the human organism, cause the will to lose its grip and induce a complete self-surrender of the whole being to the influence of hypnotism. It is well known that after these states have been induced a person may be subjected to violent physical injury without consciousness of what is being done, and without subsequently experiencing the ill effects that would ordinarily result. The "basic note" having been found and played upon, a temporary suspension of some of the ordinary laws controlling the organism is produced.

The Serpent's Hypnotic Power.

The same phenomena may be remarked in the world of the lower animals. To how great an extent dogs, horses, snakes, wild animals and insects are susceptible to harmonic vibrations, such as those of music, is a matter of dispute—but there can be no question that in many cases there is a marked susceptibility of this kind. The proceedings of snake charmers are an example in point. The many well attested stories of the influence of music, and even of the human voice, or, in some cases, of simple rhythmic motions, over ferocious beasts show the extent of this influence. The humble spider is a remarkable example of the power to perceive and distinguish vibrations. The spider's life may be said to depend upon its sensitiveness to certain notes of vibration.

It instinctively distinguishes between the vibrations set up in its web, and, perhaps, in the surrounding atmosphere, by the struggling and buzzing of a fly, and those of a dangerous bee. It rushes upon one as its prey; it hastily cuts its silken cables to assist the escape of the other.

Many of the latest studies in biology indicate that among the lowest animal forms susceptibility to vibrations—not mere mechanical vibrations, but those of light—lies at the foundation of their being. They are completely under the control of the light vibrations; feel the difference between the impact of the red waves and the blue waves, for instance; and surrender themselves wholly to the guiding influence thus exercised over them.

From the facts above mentioned it may fairly be inferred that there is at least the showing of a foundation for the "basic note" hypothesis. Everyday human intercourse demonstrates the wonderful influences of voices, musical chords, rhythmic sounds and vibrations of every kind in the natural world. Even destructive power may be exercised by mechanical and atmospheric vibration. The ear drum may be broken by a violent air wave, or the power of hearing impaired or destroyed by a succession of impacts upon the tympanum. Some vibrations exercise a paralyzing influence upon the whole organism.

In "electrocution" it is vibration that acts, suspending the functional activities of the body and even causing almost instantaneous disintegration of certain organic parts. The manifestations of electricity are all of a vibratory nature, and in the instance just cited we have almost what may be called a practical instance of the application of the principle of the imaginary "disintegrator." It is along this line—electrical investigation—that light must probably be sought upon the question of how far it is possible to control in a systematic manner the vibratory influences affecting the human organism and to discover whether anything in the nature of "basic notes" affecting that organism exists or not.

Among individuals the difference of susceptibility to harmonic sounds, or vibrations, is no less remarkable. Watch the members of an audience at a concert and note how widely various are the effects of the same music upon different individuals. Some are thrown into a state of uncontrollable nervous excitement by harmonies to which their neighbors appear to be indifferent. But in the course of the evening all the members of the audience are likely to find something suited to their peculiar organization, to which they will respond with more or less complete self-surrender.

Music is the most familiar example of the power of rhythmic vibration to affect the human organisation, but there are others no less striking. Repeated sounds, even mechanical shocks, possess the power in some cases, of inducing slumber, in others of producing the highest nervous tension and excitement. The blowing of the wind, the mere impact of atmospheric ripples upon the surface of the body, occasionally give rise to astonishing effects, and men and women are charmed by them as by some strange power of fascination. So rhythmic motions passing before the eyes often exercise a hypnotic power over the beholders, as if they had hit upon the "basic note" of the nervous system and been translated into physiological vibrations affecting the very seat of life.

The music of one race often differs widely from that of another. Oriental music is generally very different in its composition and in its basic notes from the music preferred by the Western races. Strains that arouse the most active emotions among Indians, or among Asiatics, throwing them often into ecstacies, and causing them to lose all self-control, have no effect upon us. On the other hand the irresistible harmonies of the piano, the violin and the voice of a Patti, which sweep great audiences of Europeans and Americans into a tempest of emotion, pass powerless through the ears of other races.

We now know that atoms, which, whether regarded as compound or as integral units, are the foundation of all matter, are endowed with vibrations peculiar to each kind. The atoms of solids are in constant vibration as well as those of liquids and gases. In the case of gases—and all substances no matter how solid and rigid they may be in their ordinary states, may be reduced to the gaseous condition—it is possible to measure the various rates of atomic vibration. These differ for each element. The atoms of hydrogen vibrate at a higher speed than those of oxygen; the atoms of oxygen vibrate more rapidly than those of carbonic gases, and the latter in turn more rapidly than the atoms of metallic gases, such as iron.

Upon these facts depends the constitution of the atmosphere of a planet. They show why the moon is practically airless. The reason is because, owing to its relatively small mass, the moon cannot retain as a covering for its surface gases such as oxygen and nitrogen, whose atoms possess a high rate of vibration. There is, in every instance a critical speed beyond which the power of the attraction of gravitation is unable to restrain and, so to speak, imprison the atoms and if they possess that degree of speed they emerge into free space. The force of gravity on the moon is known to be only about one-sixth as great as on the earth; the consequence is that the swiftly vibrating atoms of hydrogen, oxygen and nitrogen have all escaped from the moon, and left it virtually bare, while the earth, on the other hand, is able to retain all of those gases.

But the sun possessing more than twenty times the force of gravity of the earth, at its surface, is able to retain certain gases which our planet cannot hold. It is all a question of mass. If the gravitative power of the earth were suddenly decreased until it was no greater than that of the moon, the air we now breathe would fly away, and we would be left in the condition of fish out of water. In the case of Mars, which stands between the earth and the moon in its relative force of gravity, an atmosphere like ours is impossible; still Mars is able to retain certain gases whose atoms possess a low velocity, and thus it is not entirely airless like the moon.

Then, again, recent discoveries have proved that the atoms themselves are subject to internal vibrations. They are composed of minute corpuscles, or electrons, and in some cases, like that of radium, these particles escape with considerable rapidity, the consequence being that the atoms themselves are dissipated, and the substances composed of them disappear, as such.

These facts show us how the natural world and the universe at large are subject to change in consequence of the phenomenon of vibration, and we may say that every substance has its critical vibratory period.

Footsteps Could Shatter Bridge.

Next, let us briefly consider some of the remarkable phenomena of mechanical vibration. It is a matter of common knowledge that all structures, such as bridges, steel buildings, and even the most solid constructions of stone, are subject to vibrations which may attain destructive limits. Take a bridge; a large body of troops marching across a long bridge must break step, else they will set the structure into mechanical vibration, in rhythm with their footfalls, which may become sufficiently forceful to threaten the safety and integrity of the span. By means of a continued series of rhythmic strokes, each in itself insufficient to produce injury, even the mighty bridges spanning the East River could be brought down in ruin.

Every bridge or other structure has its basic, or critical, vibratory period, depending upon length, mass, etc., and by playing long enough upon that particular note its disintegration might be brought about. This was the basis of the imaginary "disintegrator" described in my story of the "Conquest of Mars." It was assumed, for the purpose of the story, that what is true of a bridge, is true of every organized thing, and that by discovering, through experiment, the critical vibration rate for each substance and employing that as a means of attack, anything and everything could be shaken to pieces through the setting up of irresistible internal vibrations.

Now this idea has been taken as the ground for the theory set forth at the beginning that even human beings possess each his own "basic note," a vibration period, to which he necessarily responds and which he cannot resist since it lies at the very foundation of his being. This might be called physiological vibration. That there is, in reality, a phenomenon of this description more or less affecting us all, is shown by common experience. Different persons are differently affected by the vibrations of musical chords; some respond more to one and some more to another, but all respond in some degree. The difference seems to depend not only upon individual make-up, but also upon broad racial characteristics.

In conclusion, it may be remarked that all the alleged curative application of electric vibrations rest essentially upon the idea, which may never have occurred to the minds of the inventors of such applications, that the various functional parts of the body are susceptible to stimulation, or paralysis, through vibratory influences.

HOW TO KEEP FISH ALIVE OUT OF WATER.

CAN fish live out of water?

There are German chemists who are now ready to prove that they can.

Impelled by knowledge of the great importance it would be to the fishing industries of their own country, they set themselves to the study of methods of preserving the lives of fish after they have been taken from their native element.

Now they announce that they have succeeded in solving the problem they set themselves.

They began by a careful study of the respiratory organs of the fish.

This led to the discovery that fish, though out of water, continued to live as long as their gills were kept wet. With this as a basis, the rest logically folowed.

Now they place the fish in wooden boxes, each in a separate compartment proportioned to its size.

In each of these compartments are placed cloths soaked in water and the evaporation from these cloths keeps the air sufficiently humid to supply the gills with ample moisture.

In addition there is attached to the box a reservoir containing oxygen, with a connecting tube through which flows sufficient for the needs of the fish it holds.

By this method fish can be kept alive for from three to four days, or a sufficient length of time to transport them from seacoast or river to any part of the country and to permit that they may be placed on sale in the markets, not only fresh, but still living.

TORMENTING A FASHIONABLE SOCIETY LEADER

With Relentless Ingenuity Mr. Burke-Roche for Years Has Teased His Wife, the Rich New York and Newport Beauty, and Now He Has Found a New Way to Worry Her as Long as She Lives.

"Now he calls me a bigamist! Will the persecution of that wretched man never end!"

"BIGAMIST!" shouts the Hon. J. B. Burke-Roche across the Atlantic into the ears of his former wife, now Mrs. Aurel Batonyi.

Lest the whole world of fashion and unfashion should fail to hear the dreadful charge he brings against one of the most beautiful of Newport society leaders, mother of beautiful Cynthia, who is now Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden, the Hon. Burke-Roche spreads it broadcast in a formal court document beginning:

"In the name of God and Edward VII."

You are a bigamist," he swears, "and in the name of God and King Edward I demand a divorce!"

Why does the Hon. Burke-Roche make this dreadful, this humiliating charge? Just to annoy the beautiful woman, mother of his daughter and sons, who was forced to divorce him fifteen years ago—as he has teased and tormented her ever since she withdrew herself and her fortune from his control.

Was ever before a woman so teased and relentlessly tormented? It seems a wonder that the former wife of the Hon. Burke-Roche, under such persecutions, should have been able to preserve the health and beauty which makes her now, when she is almost eligible to the honors of grandmotherhood, one of the most fascinating and active women in American society.

This fresh annoyance comes just after an almost fatal quarrel with her rich and venerable father, Frank Work—now happily forgotten in a complete reconciliation—which threatened to leave her and her two boys, now in Harvard, in serious financial straits.

The annoyances and consequent unhappiness began almost with the marriage, in 1880, when the exquisitely beautiful twenty-year-old daughter of New York's then most celebrated millionaire, bon vivant, clubman and sportsman, Frank Work, to the handsome, dashing young Irishman, James B. Burke-Roche, younger brother of Lord Fermoy, baronet, of Cork and Limerick.

After traveling on the Continent in grand style the young couple settled in London, where they entertained in lavish state. Before the year was out all the fashionable world was gossiping about the drafts on Frank Work's fortune to keep up this pace. In another reports of discord in the Burke-Roche household, due to the husband's extravagances and other causes, were well authenticated.

One day at the end of five years, Mrs. Burke-Roche, with her daughter and her two little sons, arrived from London and re-established herself in her father's house—and society said: "I told you so."

Back to Her Girlhood's Home.

The disillusioned wife who had come back to her girlhood's home, showed, for a time, the effects of a most unhappy married experience. For five years she lived quietly under her father's protection, successfully opposing every effort of her Irish husband to regain either herself, her children or more of her father's money.

Then she went to Delaware and applied for a divorce on grounds of desertion and non-support. At the trial Frank Work testified how he had been called upon to support the couple and their children. Former Ambassador Bayard, Mrs. Burke-Roche's attorney, made very cutting remarks about the Irishman's penchant for spending his father-in-law's money—and the court granted a decree to the wife, giving her custody of the three children.

Although this decree was not recognized by the English courts, Burke-Roche did not immediately begin his programme of annoyances. He became active in politics and stood for a seat in Parliament. But when he was attacked by the same party that deposed Parnell for having been implicated in a divorce case, he started the ball rolling by denying that he was a divorced man—taking advantage of the negative decision of the English courts. Burke's Peerage referring to him as a divorced man, he sued the publishers for libel and won.

For a few years Mrs. Burke-Roche permitted him to see the children at his pleasure, when they were abroad or he travelling in this country. In 1899, however, when Burke-Roche was in this country especially to see his daughter Cynthia, as he declared, he claimed that she had been sent away to some boarding school secretly, and that his letters to her had been intercepted.

The truth was that Mrs. Burke-Roche believed her husband was determined to take her daughter away from her. Then came the first of the serious annoyances which could not be concealed from the public.

Burke-Roche started habeas corpus proceedings in the New York Supreme Court to compel Mrs. Burke-Roche to produce their daughter. The suit was dismissed, though the father obtained a compromise which granted him the privilege of sometimes seeing his daughter, but at her mother's convenience and pleasure.

The notoriety of this episode was keenly felt by Mrs. Burke-Roche, and her apprehensions of further annoyances were soon to be realized.

FROM A PAINTING BY A. DE LA GANDARA

Burke-Roche missed the former munificence of Frank Work. He dabbled in finance and gold mines and found himself growing poorer instead of richer. The memory of his luxurious life as Frank Work's son-in-law seemed to fill him with fresh desire for reprisals upon the woman who had separated him from these comforts.

Fond of travel, Mrs. Burke-Roche was afraid to visit England, because there, under the English law, Burke-Roche was still her husband and master. Neither could she safely visit the European continent, if Burke-Roche chose to pursue her there with his resentment. As her husband, according to English law, wherever he found her, outside the jurisdiction of her own country, he might successfully invoke the law, even the police, to compel his wife and children to rejoin him.

He could also legally prohibit her from spending any money, and could even seize her belongings. Well knowing Burke-Roche's resentment against her, and his hot-headed recklessness, she refrained, until recently, from making more than the briefest trips abroad, avoiding England entirely when she knew her former husband to be there.

Still Her Master in England.

In May of this year the impulse to visit Europe with her charming daughter Cynthia became too powerful to be resisted. There was an "understanding' between Miss Cynthia and young Arthur Scott Burden. With a trousseau looming in prospect, how could any mother and daughter of their wealth and social position keep away from London and Paris?

Fortunately, Burke-Roche had been having troubles of his own. Probably he was still leading a secluded life somewhere on the Continent because of the English Government's desire to question him about the English-made yacht secretly transformed into a torpedo boat, which he—with the dashing recklessness of one of Thackeray's Irish heroes—had personally delivered to Russia, the enemy of his own country's ally, Japan!

The boat was taken across the North Sea through the Kiel Canal, steered by two German pilots, as required by law, and was anchored near a German cruiser until her papers could be examined.

It was here that the most thrilling chapter of this war romance was enacted, for Burke Roche cut his cable and sent the speedy turbine dashing away northward through the Baltic before the astounded German naval officers fully realized the character of the innocent looking, yacht-like thing that had been lying within a few yards of their anchor chains.

The incident can only be fully understood and comprehended when it is realized that from the time Burke Roche sneaked away from Hull until he met two Russian cruisers waiting for him in the Baltic he occupied an exceedingly precarious position.

He carried a yacht flag over as nippy a torpedo boat destroyer as has been sent from a British shipbuilding yard in years, and flimsy wooden sheathings covered her torpedo tubes, while a hastily knocked together deck house covered her rapid fire guns and armored turrets. There was not a mile of the trip that was not fraught with danger of capture and a distinctly unpleasant reckoning.

But the feat required Burke Roche's avoidance of English soil for the present.

So Mrs. Burke-Roche and her daughter plucked up courage and went abroad. Suddenly, while they were buying pretty feminine things right and left in London, the blow fell. The Hon. Burke-Roche was notifying the public through the newspapers that he would not be responsible for any debts contracted by his wife, or by his daughter, Miss Cynthia Roche!

Dismayed, unspeakably humiliated and frightened, mother and daughter fled to Paris. They had hardly domiciled themselves there before there stared them in the face this translation of a Paris newspaper announcement:

"To Whom It May Concern—The Hon. James Burke-Roche hereby makes public notice that he is in no way responsible for debts contracted in France by an American lady styling her self sometimes Mrs. Work-Roche, or Burke-Roche, or Lady Roche, Burke, Fermoy, or Roche."

Pursued Them Everywhere.

Both the French and English newspapers in Paris contained this notice. Mother and daughter hastened to the Riviera to rest their shattered nerves. Thither the wretched notices pursued them. They went to Naples and Rome, where they read the same notices printed in the Italian language.

The details of this persecution were cabled to this country. The affair created a sensation and enraged Frank Work and all Mrs. Burke-Roche's numerous friends.

Their European trip spoiled, mother and daughter came home. On the New York pier they were affectionately greeted by young Arthur Scott Burden. To a representative of this newspaper Mrs. Burke-Roche said, her eyes blazing:

"It was terrible—terrible to have one's whole trip to Europe spoiled by an apology for a husband. If I hated him before, I detest him now.

"The impudence of the thing is astounding. In the first place Burke-Roche never paid my debts, which were then 'expenses,' even before we separated. He knew positively he would not be called upon to do so now.

"It was the act of a despicable coward, and the most annoying part of it was that it accomplished its aim. It upset all my plans completely. A creature resorting to such tactics is beneath contempt."

Yet there was worse to come. Her daughter married to Arthur Scott Burden, Mrs. Burke-Roche at last found herself free to seek at last married happiness for herself. Her marriage to Aurel Batonyi, well known at Newport, and having the reputation of being the best professional whip in America, was the great social event of last July.

The Trump Card [illegible] Annoyance.

Both have always been enthusiastic lovers of horses, and in other ways their similarities of taste augured favorably for married happiness.

Frank Work and his daughter had now settled their differences, and this reconciliation seemed to leave clear skies for the future.

Burke-Roche's resentment, however, was still in good working order. The marriage to Batonyi enabled him to play his strongest card in the game, whose only object was to tease and torment the woman who had refused longer to support him. This card was a veritable ace of trumps.

Standing on his English law rights as still her husband, he brought suit in a London court for divorce, charging bigamy as the grounds.

"In the name of God and Edward VII." and in the most public way possible, he served the written charge of bigamy upon Mrs. Batonyi at her country home near Newport.

"I am much annoyed," says Mrs. Batonyi. "Now he calls me a bigamist! Will the persecution of that wretched man never end?

"But as I am an American citizen I have nothing to do with laws outside of the United States."

Burke-Roche's action will not injure Mrs. Batonyi in her own country, beyond the shock and annoyance of it. And as she will doubtless allow Burke-Roche to gain his precious English divorce by default she and her husband will be able to visit England hereafter, as is their intention, without dread of further tormentings at the instance of the Hon James Burke-Roche—except by the taunt that she was once a bigamist!

HOW TO BE YOUR OWN BEAUTY DOCTOR.

IT is a wise woman who has plenty of creams to prevent rough skin. That these things shall be pure is most important, and to insure this the best way is to make them one's self. Many of the preparations are so simple that to mix them is an easy matter.

One of the best cold creams, for instance, is made of two ounces of rose water, two ounces of almond oil, one-half ounce of spermaceti and one-half of white wax. Melt the wax and spermaceti in a basin set into a dish of boiling water. As the fats congeal remove from the heat and pour into the almond oil. Then heat, and very slowly add the rose water.

A delicious lip salve that may be put on before going into the street is made of one-half ounce of spermaceti ointment, seven and one-half grains of balsam of Peru, seven and one-half grains of alkanet and two drops of oil of cloves. Put the alkanet into the ointment in a bottle or dish, and let stand over gentle heat until the liquid is rose-colored. Then put through a strainer.

If a woman wishes to use rouge she would do well to make her own, to be sure there is no mercury in it. A simple rouge is made of one-half dram of carmine, one dram of oil of almonds, and two ounces of French chalk. Mix thoroughly and it will be fund that the chalk absorbs the oil, making an adhesive powder

BECAUSE Miss Sara Tomlinson, Whose Stomach Lining, She Swears, was Eaten Entirely Off by Armour's Canned Ham, Has Brought the First Suit Against the Packers for Ptomaine Poisoning, and Is Determined to Make the Beef Trust Smart for Putting Up Dirty, Poisonous Things for People to Eat.

IN the State of New Jersey, that tough old stronghold of trusts, a very plucky young woman has started a single-handed fight against the Beef Trust that promises to be vitally important to every man, woman and child in the United States. And she has given the Beef Trust the worst fright it ever had.

Miss Sara Verona Tomlinson—that is her name—ate four slices of ham, about a quarter of an inch thick each, from one of the Armour canned preparations, and she claims in consequence that the inner lining of her stomach has been eaten out by the poison of ptomaines as if by an acid. She has, through her lawyers, Judge Howard Carrow and William J. Kraft, sued for $20,000 damages. Armour & Co., of Chicago, are made the direct defendants. This is the case in a nutshell.

But the real, inner and significant importance of the case isn't that Miss Tomlinson may win her own particular suit and collect her $20,000 from the beef people.

The essential and significant value of her single-handed action lies in these particulars:

That for the first time in its history the Beef Trust has been called to account as a poisoner.

That, knowing its peril, it has filed what the law calls a demurrer and in defiance of equity and public good tries to shift upon the retailer and its agent its liability for the pain and death it causes.

That in this demurrer it makes the impudent, rascally and phenomenal statement that it can poison, adulterate and masquerade its goods in any way it sees fit, and that only the retailer who buys the products to sell to the public is responsible to that same public.

That if Miss Tomlinson loses her case against the beef people, she will be constrained to sue the retailer who sells their goods, and that in that case, if she wins, the trust will be unable hereafter to get retailers to sell its products.

That if she wins her case against the packers, on the other hand, the bars are let down, and any time any one eats any preserves, jelly, tomato catsup, pickled grouse, canned goods or anything else the octopus puts up, and suffers from it, he may, provided only he can prove that nothing else was responsible for the injury, collect from the company adequate damages.

That if this comes to pass the Beef Trust will be forced to stop its wholesale adulteration and impurities and distribute pure and undefiled food in its various forms.

Because, if it doesn't, there will be so many suits from every part of the United States, and outside of it, perhaps, that the Beef Trust's enormous business in preserved products will be destroyed.

And it is the outcome with all its destructive possibilities of this suit of Miss Tomlinson that has given the Beef Trust the greatest scare of its life. When Upton Sinclair wrote the "Jungle" he certainly gave those carniverous gentlemen, Messrs. Armour, Swift, Cudahy et al., an uncomfortable quarter of a year, but this pretty little girl—for she was pretty before the ravages of the ptomaines of Chicago ham—has struck the trust a blow that bids fair to leave an abiding and most unpleasant impression.

Miss Sara Verona Tomlinson is the daughter of J. V. Tomlinson, of Vineland, N. J. She comes of old New England stock—Vineland was settled chiefly by folk from New Hampshire and Vermont—and the girl's great-great-grandfather was one of the town's pioneers. Very pretty and attractive and in the full flush of the health of youth she studied first of all music and then dentistry. She studied hard at her last profession and was finally graduated with the degree of doctor from a New York institute. Then she started out to perfect herself by working as assistant in a dental establishment in the same city. Her ultimate ambition was to go to South America, where dentists are in great demand.

In the meantime she lived in two rooms in New York, "cooking" says the bill of particulars, "her own breakfast and eating her luncheon at a restaurant nearby."

It was on April 3 of last year that Miss Tomlinson went to a nearby delicatessen store and bought the can—one pound warranted—and took it back to her rooms. She had suffered from a trying headache the night before, had dined sparsely on crackers and tea and had gone to bed. She had awakened minus the headache, but with a good healthy appetite. After buying the Armour production Miss Tomlinson spread out for herself the following simple breakfast:

A pot of coffee.
Four slices of bread and butter.
Four thick slices of the Armour ham.

All of these she ate and set off for work.

An hour afterward Miss Tomlinson felt dizzy. Half an hour after that she was attacked with violent headache and other disagreeable symptoms. When two hours had elapsed the head dentist, who is something of a physician, saw that there was something serious the matter.

"You're sick, my child," he said, and then noting the greenish pallor of the girl, "you're poisoned," he added.

A physician was summoned and after a careful examination he pronounced it an acute case of ptomaine poisoning.

Miss Tomlinson at her request was taken to her home in Vineland, and for sixteen weeks remained under the care of a trained nurse. She showed no improvement and was then taken to the German Hospital in Philadelphia. From that institution, fourteen weeks after, she was discharged—not because she was cured, but because nothing could be done for her. The poison in the ham had eaten off the inner lining of the stomach, and she lived only by the administration of liquid foods. But under the conditions not even liquid food can be assimilated, and from a plump, pretty girl of 142 pounds Miss Tomlinson has wasted away until to-day she weighs exactly ninety-two. She is growing weaker each day, her father is compelled to carry her up and down stairs and she has had to give up her dream of going on with her profession.

In August, 1905, Mr. Tomlinson fired the first gun of her battle with the trust by writing the following letter to the Armour Company.

"My daughter was poisoned by eating a brand of your canned ham, and has been sick for twenty weeks. If your representative in Philadelphia wishes to investigate or to see her he will find her at the German Hospital."

No reply was ever received and the matter was then put into the hands of Judge Carrow and Mr. Kraft, who began the suit for the twenty thousand dollars.

It was the first time that the Beef Trust had ever been attacked in this quarter and they hurriedly sent their Philadelphia agent, James Condran, to arrange for a conference. Condran found that business was meant and that quick action was necessary. A meeting was arranged, a compromise offered and rejected. The Beef Trust's next move was to file their most remarkable demurrer.

This astonishing demurrer reads as follows:

"By the manufacture and sale of the product to a retail dealer there was no responsibility by this defendant for the quality of the said product to a purchaser from the retail dealer, but any action the plaintiff may have lies, if at all, against the said retail dealer and not against this defendant."

Think what this assertion, filed in open court by the Beef Trust's own legal representatives, Gaskill & Gaskill, of Camden, N. J., means.

Reading between the lines and interpreting its significance, this demurrer appears to declare:

"We, the Beef Trust, can pack diseased meat, can poison, adulterate or doctor such product as we will, and then sell it with impunity to the middleman to be resold to the public by him as he sees fit, because we, the Beef Trust, know that if there is illness or death resulting from such adulterated, doctored or poisoned product there is no remedy at law against us, only against the said middleman who has been fool enough to take our goods and sell them to the public."

In other words the Beef Trust not only repeats the immortally insolent words of William H. Vanderbilt, but betrays the very men who sustain it.

To this defiant utterance of Packingtown Carrow & Kraft have an answer. They found it in a celebrated work on criminal negligence and in it the general statement is laid down that "the manufacturer of any product is to be held responsible for the effect that such product may have upon any user or consumer."

To support this opinion there are kindred precedents, in spite of the fact that Miss Tomlinson is the first to strike at the Beef Trust. There are cases dealing with the bottling trust, the candy trust, and the chocolate trust. These cases have had trials in New York, Massachusetts, Georgia and Michigan, and in each the plaintiff has won. It is the knowledge of that fact that makes the corporation in question so uneasy.

It is a suit in New York against a Trust manufacturer of a certain "refreshing and nourishing" beverage, however, that is one of the strongest precedents. A purchaser who had been made ill by drinking of the same "refreshing and nourishing" beverage sued the fountain head of the liquid evil. He won. The lower courts decided that the manufacturer and not the man from whom the plaintiff had bought the drink was solely responsible.

At once the fountain head sought in the higher courts to prove that after he had sold the beverage to any middle man his responsibility ceased so far as the ultimate consumer was concerned. If this unfortunate had bought from the middleman, it was argued, it was up to the latter as the party who had last handled the stuff. The Supreme Court shattered this sophistical defense and put the responsibility squarely up to the people who had made the drink. In this case ground glass was found in the liquid, which as a poisonous compound puts Miss Tomlinson's case squarely on all fours with it.

In the Michigan case a woman partook of some candy that contained a poisonous adulterant. Instead of suing the little shop that sold her the stuff she went after the Candy Trust that had supplied the little shop. She won.

There are many other cases, but they run along practically all along the same lines.

"This is the great difficulty in all such cases," said Lawyer Kraft. "To prove that it is the article stated and nothing else that has caused the illness. In this case Miss Tomlinson has a clear bill. The night before she took nothing but crackers and tea. Her breakfast consisted of coffee, sugar, bread and the ham. Her sickness was due to ptomaine poisoning. Now, ptomaines are never found in crackers or bread or sugar, and cannot possibly exist in tea or coffee. Medical experts will prove this and also prove the character of Miss Tomlinson's ailment. We anticipate no trouble on this score at all.

"In the State of New Jersey no such litigation against the defendants has ever occurred. Therefore such a case is called a "case of first impression" and the Armour demurrer has been filed to prove that there has been no precedent and that there is no case.

"I have a very full brief on analogous cases against other trusts in other States, and I believe that I can make this case a precedent one against this trust

"But if they win in their first sparrings that will only shift our action. The case will be pushed to the extremest ends.

"And think of the position in which the Beef Trust has placed itself.

"It does not come out openly and try to prove that it was not the ham that poisoned Miss Tomlinson It does not stand out manfully and defend the action. What does it do? It crawls behind the little retailer and pushes him up for fire Why, in that demurrer the Trust openly declares that it may poison at will and that if it does, only the poor dupe to whom it sells its goods is to blame. Think of what that means. This case will do one of two things. Either by opening the flood gates to hundreds of suits of victims it will stop the Beef Trust perforce from poisoning humanity by the terrific assault that will be made upon its treasury, or it will show the retailers that it is so dangerous to handle the Beef Trust's goods that no one will dare to sell a single product of Packingtown.

"In each event, to save itself from destruction, the Beef Trust will have to stop its murdering."

Miss Tomlinson, in her Vineland home, was too weak to say much.

"I want the money," she said, "of course, because all the things I worked for for a long time have now become impossible. Isn't it dreadful that the plans of a lifetime can be upset by those unscrupulous people out in Chicago. But more than the money I want to stop this iniquity if I can. Mr. Kraft tells me that if I win this case the Trust will not dare to poison any one else. I think that would be much more satisfaction to me than the $20,000."

MARGARET LESLIE.

"I AM so happy. God bless the darling. I will have my own sweet baby boy in my arms Friday before noon."

Thus wrote Margaret Leslie, the actress, of her idolized twelve-year-old son, Woody Leslie, on Wednesday morning, October 17, in her room at the Palace Hotel, in Chicago.

At the same moment, in another room of the same hotel, Howard Nicholas, penniless and desperate and crippled—having lost a leg, he was reduced to a wooden one—sat reading a letter from his mother.

Among other loving counsels he read the following words of a poem she had tenderly enclosed:

"There are two trails in life, my boy,
One leads to height and fame,
To honor, glory, peace and joy,
And one to depths of shame.
"And you can reach that glorious height—
Its honors can be won—
Or you can grope in shame's dark night—
It's up to you, my son."

The letter written by the woman! The letter read by the man! How little the writer of either epistle dreamed that before the dawn of another day Margaret Leslie would be dead—choked to death at the hands of the same Howard Nicholas and a confederate.

"It's up to you, my boy," his mother wrote, and Howard Nicholas deliberately chose the "path of shame" of which she wrote.

His confession shows this, the confession which he made after three days of intense sweating by the Chicago detectives. It is an appalling confession—this revelation of the trustful confidence of the pretty defenceless actress which made her the victim of one of the cold blooded and bloodthirsty murders imaginable.

Margaret Leslie, the actress, thirty-two years old, was found dead in her room, No. 407, of the Palace Hotel, Chicago, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon of Thursday, October 18.

An empty chloroform phial stood on her dressing table. An undergarment was tightly knotted around her neck. There were deep black telling marks upon the throat. The two gas jets in the room were turned on, and the door of the room was locked from the outside. The key was lying on a window sill thirty feet down the hall.

Yet, in the face of all this evidence, the police and a coroner's jury declared the case to be one of suicide, and a formal verdict to that effect was returned.

Margaret Leslie was a devout Catholic. The formal verdict of suicide meant that her body must lie in unconsecrated ground. Her broken-hearted father, M. P. Woody, of Indianapolis, protested passionately against the verdict.

"My daughter was murdered," he cried, his voice broken with emotion. "Where are her diamonds? She had $2,000 worth of jewels, and not one of them is to be found.

"Besides here is a letter from her, written the day before her body was found, in which she is planning with rapture for the home-coming of her boy from college next Friday . Read that letter and be convinced, as I am, that my child was murdered, and murdered for her diamonds."

Late Saturday afternoon Nicholas was arrested. With his capture came the revelation of a most colossal blunder of the Chicago police.

It was discovered that under his own name Nicholas had been a prisoner in two of the city's most important police stations from Thursday afternoon—two hours after the body of Mrs. Leslie was found—until Saturday morning, when he was released by Justice Prindiville, because of lack of evidence against him.

The man had been arrested while trying to pawn one of the diamonds taken from the dead woman and which The Chicago American's extras were describing to thousands of readers. Unable to find the owner of the jewel, the policemen who arrested him had returned the ring to Nicholas and had acquiesced in his release. He had first hidden the gems in his wooden leg as he afterwards confessed. So he calmly put the ring back where he took it from and went hobbling around for another chance to pawn it.

The bravado of the man was so great and his certainty that he could fool the police so assured that a few hours after his discharge he walked into the Central Station, the "front office" dreaded of malefactors, and, accosting Detective McGuire, who had arrested him, demanded the return of several pawn tickets taken from him when arrested.

First made aware of the man's identity from The American's editions the detectives seized Nicholas and hustled him downstairs.

Then followed three days of a terrific "sweating" of Nicholas by Assistant Chief Schuettler, Captain of Detectives O'Brien and Detective McGuire, and on Tuesday afternoon he was confronted by the pawnbroker to whom he had tried to pledge one of the unfortunate woman's rings. Nicholas broke down and confessed—confessed that he and a drug clerk, a chance acquaintance of a drinking bout, Leonard Lippold, alias Leopold, alias Len Harding, had murdered the actress.

With the confession came the mortifying realization that Lippold also had been in police grasp for a whole day. Arrested within a stone's throw of Central Headquarters for assault, Lippold had been searched and questioned by several officers. As in the case of Nicholas, several of the diamonds stolen from the murdered woman, were concealed about his clothing while he conversed with his inquisitors.

Then came the spectacular man hunt for the drug clerk, suspected of hiding behind the petticoats of his sweetheart Trixie Vera, who was arrested in Wisconsin the week before last, and who swore that Nicholas and not he was the actual strangler, and that he himself was merely a tool of Nicholas. The two miscreants had begun to forswear each thus early.

Just when and where Nicholas and Lippold first whispered to each other of their ugly plot on the unsuspecting and innocent Margaret Leslie is immaterial, both men lie so. But the one essential fact stands out like a silhouette, they wanted to get hold between them of the woman's diamonds. It was a desperate game, but so were the immediate needs. So they put their heads together, and they skulked and sneaked around and spied and plotted, and even "spotted" her shadow against her window curtain to see when it was most opportune and safest to perfect their scheme. Alone one spotted her while she put away her jewels; together they spotted her in the street. They were ready several times to attack the unfortunate, but were often baffled in the scheme. And it was so hideous a scheme as to make one shudder. It was to lure and entrap an absolutely unsuspecting and trusting woman into a private conversation with her in her room when no one was by to save her. Then to drug her, or chloroform her, knock her down as a steer in the Chicago stock yards is knocked down, if need be—anything, as long as she be done away with, the diamonds stolen and the thugs escape and the whole heinous thing be covered up in darkness.

Listen to this appalling narrative; Nicholas is confessing to the police: "We then went up to the fourth floor to room No. 407, which was occupied by Margaret Leslie.

"In response to our knock she came to the door and said, 'Why, hello, there.' I said 'Good morning,' and she answered, 'Wait a minute and you can come in.'

"Then she opened the door.

"We went in, Leopold Harding and I, and I introduced him as my friend, adding that he was a theatrical man.

"We got to talking about theatrical business. He told her he had a company on the road and was in need of a leading woman; he thought she would fill the bill.

"This seemed to interest her very much.

"I was sitting on the foot of the bed, she was sitting on a chair near the head of the bed and he was sitting to one side facing her.

"I got up and walked to the window to throw out a cigarette.

"Just as I threw the cigarette out of the window he got up and stretched himself, still talking all the while to Margaret Leslie. She had just asked him (with natural interest), 'How many members are there in the company and who are they?'

"He replied, 'Ten or twelve.'

"She said, 'Then, who is playing the leading lady?'

"Mr. Harding responded, 'Margaret Leslie, do you want to know?'

"I was in front of the mirror near the window, combing my hair at this time. In answer to his question she said simply, 'Yes, of course I want to know.'"

So he stood, he says—cold, impassive, detestable, while his villainous confederate gouged his knees into the poor woman's back, doubled her up like a brute with a jack-knife and smothered and throttled her.

"At that moment I saw Len Harding jump and grab Margaret Leslie by the throat. He choked her into unconsciousness before she had hardly got the words out of her mouth, and then, turning to me, he said, 'Give me the "dope."' He had put this on the dresser, unknown to either of us.

"I picked up the chloroform bottle off the dresser and pulled the cork. There was a towel, too, on the dresser, and I poured the contents of the bottle on the towel, and as I did so he grabbed it and pressed it over her nose. During this time she had slipped down onto the floor; so had the bottle.

"He picked out an undergarment and was about to tie it around her neck as I lifted her head to put my head to her breast to see if her heart was beating. He slipped this around her neck, and tied two knots, as he said, 'Well, seeing I have gone this far, I will make sure of it.' He then exerted all his force to tie the noose as tight as he could.

"'Where are the stones?' he gasped. I remember answering, 'How do I know?'

"As he tightened the noose around her neck, he sat on the side of the bed. He felt for her purse. He reached it. He opened it. He took out the chamois bag containing the diamonds. He tossed the chamois bag to me and said, 'See if they are in there.' He was still watching her.

"I looked into the chamois case, and by feeling in the little pockets found the diamonds were there. 'Give it to me,' he muttered. He grabbed it out of my hand. He laid all the diamonds down on the bed. He looked them over and taking three of the stones, consisting of a diamond earring and two big diamond rings, left one diamond earring and three small diamond rings for me. He put his diamonds in his pocket, and I put mine in my pocket. Then he said, 'This satisfies me,' and he asked me if I was satisfied. I said, 'I haven't a word to say.'

"He took the chamois bag at the same time and put it in his pocket. He then jumped up suddenly and said, 'I am going to blow.' Margaret Leslie lay quiet there on the floor.

"As he jumped up he turned the gas out, and then turned it on again, and we got out. He took the key out of the door as he went out and laid it on a window outside on the right hand side of the hall as we passed along. Then we went to my room, No. 225.

"I took the four diamonds that were given to me and put them in my artificial leg.

"Then I crept back to Margaret Leslie's room and carefully placed the chloroform bottle on her dresser.

"Then I went to bed."

And all the while Margaret Leslie, who had received the villains into her room with the utmost trust and simplicity, lay quiet on the floor.

And probably Nicholas lit another cigarette in bed and then went placidly to sleep—for this confession, a calm, cold recital of the details of the strangling and robbing of this confiding woman and foisting all the actual strangling and robbing on his confederate, clearly reveals him as utterly heartless, inhuman, iniquitous.

A wooden leg is universally allowed to be the property of comedy. With Nicholas this artificial leg of his where he hid Margaret Leslie's diamonds was the tragedy of his whole life.

For the money which he received for the loss of his own natural leg made possible his transformation from a hard-working honest brakeman to the cynical, mistaken fool who deliberately took a human life to continue the silly career which that money had made possible.

He was a poor but happy young brakeman when he lost his leg. When he became possessed of nearly $8,000 damages with no restrictions cast upon him as to its expenditure, he lost his balance. With it he caught a false glimpse of an entirely new life. He fooled himself with the thought that he was a man of the world.

While his money lasted he was a king among the leeches, male and female, that gathered about him. When he came to the end of his possessions he saw them fall away. His little brief moment was over.

And to prolong it just a few months he lent himself to the pitiless, relentless scheme to murder Margaret Leslie and pilfer her diamonds from her corpse.

Hadn't he played the part of an "angel?" Hadn't he lavished the most of the fortune he got from the loss of his leg upon Maxine Merrill, the girl whom he starred in "The Slave Girl" company? He had strutted his little hour and he could not bear to lose one moment of it—no, not even if it were to be the taking of another's life to satisfy his own lust for pleasure. And that's how it came about that he lighted a cigarette, and went to bed and left Margaret Leslie "very quiet on the floor."

So Howard Nicholas, the self-confessed destroyer of Margaret Leslie, sits in his narrow cell in the East Chicago avenue station, alone with his conscience and deserted—deserted even by the soubrette to whom he played so pleasurably the "angel."

"Or you can grope in Shame's dark night,
It's up to you, my son."

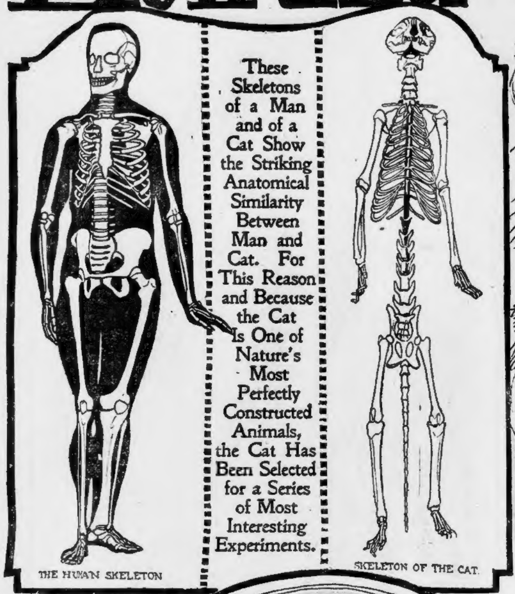
The United States Government to Breed More Perfect Men and Women.



These Skeletons of a Man and of a Cat Show the Striking Anatomical Similarity Between Man and Cat. For This Reason and Because the Cat Is One of Nature's Most Perfectly Constructed Animals, the Cat Has Been Selected for a Series of Most Interesting Experiments.

> "The tremendous triumph when Science shall have taught us how to breed physically stronger and more perfect children, nobler mental and moral qualities, approaching as near to perfection as mortal creatures can do."

THE United States Government has taken up the work of aiding in the development of improved men and women by scientific methods. This is a task which scientists have long urged should be the first duty of the Government, and one which without great outlay or difficulty is certain to result in a vast increase of human happiness and of mental and physical power.

Dr. Willett M. Hays, Assistant United States Secretary of Agriculture, has appointed a Committee of Eugenics. The members of the committee are Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, the famous electrical inventor; Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford University; Major Charles Woodruff, M. D., U. S. A., a great authority on sanitation; Dr. Charles B. Henderson, of New York, and the Rev. J. E. Gilbert, of Washington.

Eugenics is "the science of generative or procreative development; the doctrine of progress or evolution, especially in the human race, through improved conditions in the relations of the sexes."

Among the duties of the committee as defined by Dr. Hays will be "to investigate and report on heredity in the human race; to devise methods of recording the values of the blood of individuals, families, peoples and races; to emphasize the value of superior blood and the menace to society of inferior blood, and to suggest methods of improving the heredity of the family, the people or the race." The committee will submit a preliminary report at the meeting of the American Breeders' Association, which meets from January 15 to January 18 at Columbus, Ohio.

The committee will collate and render available for the use of the people all knowledge to be derived from studies of the principles of heredity, from works on the laws of evolution, from many branches of medical and surgical science, from the experiments of cattle breeders, poultry raisers and naturalists of various classes, from the experiments and discoveries of biological students like Professor Jacques Loeb and from authorities on plant breeding, among whom Luther Burbank has achieved the most remarkable results.

The principal methods by which the evolution of a higher type of man is to be promoted are:

1. The careful scientific selection of persons who are about to be united in marriage.

2. The provision of hygienic surroundings and scientifically selected diet for everybody.

3. The mental and physical training of the young and of the community in general.

When the committee have discovered by observation and experiment how the perfect man can be produced, they will put their reforms into general practice, first by instructing the public, and then, if possible, by laws enforcing the reforms. The scientists are confident that they will eventually be able to secure laws enforcing their recommendations and they are greatly encouraged by the fact that President Roosevelt is deeply interested in their work.

Dr. Hays was formerly the head of the United States Agricultural Experiment Station in Minnesota. He experimented on plants and animals and has a great practical knowledge of the laws of heredity and strongly marked theories upon the subject.

The committee will devise new methods of recording the physical and mental values of various types and races of humanity, with a view to combining their most valuable characteristics in the improved type.

They will aim at producing a type of man who will combine the large frame and strength of the ideal Anglo-Saxon or Scandinavian, the practical intelligence of the American, the intellect of the high German, the art-loving qualities and sunny temperament of the Latin, and so forth.

They will suggest methods by which the laws of heredity can be applied to men, so that disease, vice and crime may be eradicated. They will endeavor to ascertain whether the marriage of two blind persons or two deaf persons or of any two persons having a certain defect in common will result in the reproduction of that defect in their offspring, and if so, they will suggest means of preventing such marriages. They will apply this line of investigation to all the more dangerous constitutional diseases that affect humanity, many of which are regarded as hereditary, among them being consumption, cancer, insanity, epilepsy, nervous diseases and many others.

The greatest practical aid to the committee will be gained from the results which have already been obtained in breeding improved animals, and nowhere have such wonders been accomplished in this direction as in the United States. Man is, of course, an animal, and the laws of life and development are the same with him as with the beasts. It is true that the object of cattle breeding is usually to produce animals of greater meat-bulk and greater endurance and having finer coats. Of these qualities only one would be desired in man—that of endurance—but the fact that these improvements in animals can be produced by artificial modifications indicates how much could be done with man.

One of the most remarkable animals lately produced by science is the "catalo," which is a compound of the buffalo and the ordinary cow. Thousands of acres are to be set aside for the cultivation of this animal, which has proved one of the most valuable of all domestic animals to the farmer.

By crossing the Galloway cow with a pure bison an animal has been obtained that yields a lustrous black robe, which alone fetches more money than the average steer. "Buffalo" Jones, who has made a specialty of this enterprise, sold one such robe for $300. The crossbred animal possesses the beautiful thick, warm coat of the buffalo and the meat and milk yielding qualities of the ordinary bull or cow. It is able to weather storms and outlive heat and cold which would kill any domestic steer. For this reason it can be kept in parts of the United States where ordinary cattle are killed by the severe Winters.

The halfbreeds are very prolific, the females giving birth to a calf annually. They have a black and glossy coat, which, though rare as yet in the fur market, is known as "seal buffalo." Their heads are less clumsy and their humps less prominent than that in the male parent; their steaks are juicy, tender and deliciously flavored; the females are superior "milkers."

"Buffalo" Jones, of Oklahoma, who is co-operating with the Government in this enterprise, possesses the most remarkable herd in existence, which includes about one hundred purebred buffaloes and a somewhat larger number of crossbred animals. When testifying on this subject before a Congressional Committee recently Mr. Jones said that as the American buffalo was doomed to practical extinction, it was most important that the most valuable qualities of the animal should be preserved.

Combining Various Animals.

The production of the catalo proves that the useful characteristics of two very different types of animals can be permanently combined. Similar results could be obtained with men and women of different races.

Another useful compound animal is the "zebrula," which is a cross between the zebra and horse. It has the usefulness and the docility of the horse combined with the hardihood of the zebra. The latter animal is possessed of remarkable swiftness, great strength of back and high intelligence. It transmits these qualities as well as its perfectly formed feet, to its hybrid young, which also inherit in a large degree its capacity for adopting itself to any kind of climate from tropic heat to many degrees of frost. The crossbred zebrula is more quiet and tractable than the common mule. It retains the beautiful stripes of its father, except on the croup, where they are broken into spots. This animal will be very valuable in regions where great strength and ability to endure tropical climates are required. They will be particularly useful in hauling artillery in tropical countries.

Nature has already produced a combination between the zebra and the giraffe. This animal is known as the okapi and only a few specimens exist in the heart of Central Africa. It has the giraffe's useful quality of living with hardly any water, by merely licking the moisture from the upper sides of the leaves of trees. At the same time it is much stronger than the giraffe, which is at the mercy of nearly every other animal and cannot even get up after it has fallen down. This case shows that nature is still engaged in solving the problem of producing more useful animals.

A new scientific animal which promises to be of the greatest benefit to man is "the guinea-turkey." This creature is a cross between the guinea-fowl and the turkey, and possesses the bulk of the latter with the delicate, eatable meat of the common chicken. The guinea-turkey reaches a weight of twenty pounds or more. Its eggs are larger than those of the guinea hen and more palatable than those of the turkey.

Another experiment is now in progress under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture with a view to making a great change in the common hen. The present bird is developed from an Asiatic wild species that laid only thirty or forty eggs a year. The civilized hen now lays about one hundred and fifty a year at the maximum. The problem now before the government is to produce a hen that will lay one egg a day regularly. Fifty hens are kept under observation and the eggs of each are carefully kept separate and counted during a period of a year. Breeds of chickens are raised from the eggs of those that lay most frequently, and it is expected that from these a race of phenomenal egg layers will be produced.

This experiment shows how the process of natural selection may be assisted by nature.

Professor George W. Gowell, agricultural expert and poultry specialist at the University of Maine, is also seeking to develop a hen that will lay at least one egg a day. He is making great progress. He has already developed more than forty hens that have in a year, laid more than 200 eggs apiece, a great many that have exceeded 160 in a year and one whose record is 251. If the egg production of the present number of hens in the United States could be raised to one per day, the increase in national wealth would be $25,000,000 yearly.

An experiment on animals still more directly related to the human race is now being made under the auspices of the great Carnegie Institution. These experiments are going on at the Station for Experimental Evolution in Biology, at Cold Spring Harbor, which is a branch of the Institution.

Professor Charles B. Davenport, Superintendent of this station, is aiming to produce a cat which shall be white, blue-eyed, deaf, long-haired, tailless and polydactyl or possessing superfluous toes.

The experiment, if successful, will prove that science can absolutely control the development of a cat's physical characteristics. Now, the cat bears an exceedingly close resemblance to man in physical structure and constitution, and therefore it is believed that it will at some future time be possible to control the physical development of man in a similar manner. This is the ultimate object of these remarkable experiments, stated in as simple and popular a manner as possible, although the learned experts who are engaged upon them would hesitate to state this object without many modifications which the layman would find it difficult to understand.

These experiments aim to demonstrate that if science can produce a white, blue-eyed, deaf, long-haired, tailless, polydactyl cat, it can also produce a large Tremendously Interesting and Important New Experiments to Improve the Human Race and Lengthen Our Lives by Applying to Husbands and Wives the Same Scientific Discoveries Which Have Produced Bigger, Healthier, Better Cattle, Poultry, Fruits, Vegetables and Cereals.

What Science Can Do. By Prof. Garrett P. Serviss.

MODERN science has taught us that the ways of nature can be improved. In the animal kingdom and in the vegetable world science points to its triumphs in controlling and improving upon nature. Intelligent study and faithful experiments have produced not only bigger, better, more splendid specimens than nature has been able to produce, but in many instances quite new species of animals have been bred which nature, left to herself, never would have dreamed of.

In the vegetable world the successes of Professor Burbank are already famous—he has quadrupled the size of fruits, he has produced large, luscious specimens from ugly, bitter little fruits which were unfit to eat, and he has brought into existence new and better varieties of many things which nature never contemplated, or, at least, never carried out.

It is, therefore, only as a logical result of all this that the scientific mind should turn now to the human race. There can be no doubt that the principles which science has found to apply so satisfactorily to animals and vegetables will also apply to our own kind, for physically we are only animals.

But all the successes of science up to now will be of insignificant importance as compared with the tremendous triumph when science shall have taught us how to breed physically stronger and more perfect children, and, perhaps, future men and women of nobler mental and moral qualities, approaching as near to perfection as mortal creatures can.

Along with this improvement of quality and capacity will certainly go a great increase in the length of life; the average may be extended to a hundred years. Professor Metchnikoff has shown that already such a lengthening of life is quite within our reach. Old age will be made more enjoyable, and will be stripped of most of its disabilities. Man will still be young at three-score and ten. Then, too, it is clearly evident that new capacities for enjoying life will be developed under the fostering hand of science. The new men and women raised up by the new science of "eugenics" will have, by the mere effect of their improved physique, a richer, fuller, more agreeable life than their predecessors have enjoyed.

brained, broad shouldered, big lunged, highly intellectual man—in fact an almost perfect man, combining all the best qualities of all the highest existing types of man and infinitely superior to any one of them.

The lay reader will naturally wonder why the scientists should begin by seeking to produce the very remarkable type of cat mentioned. It is not because a white, blue-eyed, deaf, long-haired, tailless, polydactyl cat is any more valuable, intellectual, useful, or beautiful than a common or garden tabby cat. It is because the combination of such remarkable qualities in a specially bred specimen would prove that their combination in one animal was the result of scientific manipulation. If less strange but possibly more useful feline characteristics, such as strength, lung power and keenness of scent, were aimed at, there would be a possibility of arguing that their presence in the specially bred cat was the result of accident, but that could not be argued in the case of the experimental cat now contemplated. The aim of the experiments, then, at the present stage is not so much to produce a perfect animal as to prove how far scientific control is effective in producing a predetermined type of cat.

Professor Davenport, speaking of these experiments, says:

"If characteristics are for the most part inherited entire and can be combined in various ways, like atoms of chemistry, it should be possible to obtain any desired combination."

It is to ascertain with scientific certainty the laws governing this combination of characteristics in animals that he has undertaken the task of producing a cat possessing certain predetermined characteristics.

With such laws known and understood, it will be comparatively simple to apply them in the work of developing all other animals—including man—on similar predetermined lines.

In former ages the cat, as is proved by fossil remains, was of great size, being as large as are the lions of our day. At all times and in all countries, however, as far as the records of history can tell us, the cat has been the friendly companion of man, and especially of woman.

But none of these considerations governed Professor Davenport in his selection of the cat as the animal destined to confer benefits of the highest order on the future of the human race. His choice was governed mainly by the fecundity and structural organization of the cat, for, considered anatomically, the cat in many ways resembles man, and success in obtaining a desired combination of characteristics in the one will prove the possibility of achieving a like result in the other.

Of the numerous kittens already produced several are marked by one or more of the sought-for peculiarities, and it is by mating and remating those that possess them in the strongest degree, and eliminating from the process those in which they are lacking, that he expects to present to the world a new race or species of cat.

But Professor Davenport does not confine his studies of inheritance in domesticated animals to cats alone. When beginning his experiments at the station he also provided himself with several jungle fowl and domestic fowl, with ducks, with pigeons, with canaries, with European goldfinches, with two Irish goats, with five sheep, numbering among them two five-nippled ewes and one six-nippled lamb, and with Jersey and Holstein cattle, and with all these he is experimenting on lines similar, from a scientific standpoint, to those he has laid out for himself with his family of cats.

To the layman, at first view, the practical results of such experiments may not in all cases be apparent, but in that of the experimental mating of Jersey and Holstein cattle the beneficial results will be appreciated by every one.

The Holstein cow, as is well known, yields a large quantity of milk, while the Jersey produces a much smaller quantity, but of superior quality.

The task that the professor has set himself is to unite the two types of animal so that a new one will be produced, giving the large quantity of milk peculiar to the Holstein and possessing the superior quality of that of the Jersey.

At the same time other members of the station staff are pursuing experiments on similar lines in an endeavor to gain further knowledge of the factors of evolution, of variation, of inheritance and adjustment, although the subjects they have chosen are different in kind.

The improvement of the human race is the object of the extraordinary beauty colony established by M. Rachatnikoff, a very rich Russian land owner near Moscow.

During the last twenty years M. Rachatnikoff has kept his eye open for handsome young peasants of both sexes. Whenever he discovers a pair that he thinks are physically perfect enough to suit him he brings them together and offers them a farm and house all stocked and ready for them on condition that they shall marry one another and live under his eye.

The Rachatnikoff estate now contains one hundred and fifty babies and children whose health and beauty are famed throughout Russia as results of his human breeding experiments.

Last year the first wedding among the specially bred offspring occurred when Miss Vera Strellitz, the prettiest of all the children, married the gigantic and handsome Maxim Sakharoff, the prize specimen of all the youths.

At the present moment M. Rachatnikoff is eagerly awaiting the arrival of the handsomest baby ever born, a representative of the third generation of his colony.

Rachatnikoff is a firm follower of Darwin, and in deference to the law of natural selection he determined first of all to make his new race beautiful so that they would naturally love each other and not some interloping outsider.

An entire wing of the Rachatnikoff mansion is filled with skeletons, casts and illustrations of various types of men and anthropoid apes, from our ancestors of the stone age down to the races of to-day. Every book or article written on the subject of man's origin or development has found its way into another wing.

In still another the walls are covered with ancient Egyptian, Chaldean, Chinese and Indian carvings of the human figure. Twenty Egyptian mummies occupy one room. Precious fragments and casts of Greek statuary adorn another. Between the two rooms is a third in which fourteen human skeletons, complete in every bone, stand on their frames. These represent the seven varieties of the human species that are strongly represented in Russia.

Played Chess with Bones.

To see Rachatnikoff at his daily labors one would think him at work building a "Frankenstein." Out of all his assortments of bones he tries combination after combination, putting the mixed skeletons together on a special setting-up device of his own invention. The head of a Japanese on the spine of an Englishman, with the ribs of a Dane, the hips and thighs of a negro and the feet and lower legs of an American sprinter whose body was lost in the Spanish-American war formed one of his combinations.

In all his work Rachatnikoff has been planning out the proportions of his perfect future Russian. He has not the slightest doubt that in a few generations an approximation to his ideal can be reached in the way of measurements and looks. Of course, he will be dead and gone, but his estate and instructions will cause the work to go on.

When the colony boasts several hundred of both sexes who are close to his theoretically perfect human being, the new race will be bred with an eye to longevity. When the average of one hundred years is reached this will stop and the breeding from that time on will be wholly for intellectual qualities.

In recent years it has become apparent to scientists that the law of natural selection, as far as man is concerned, is modified by the law of attraction to opposites. This means that a man or woman is almost invariably attracted by a face that is the opposite of his or her own. The law has been formulated with great precision recently by a Frenchman [illegible]

Eager to Be Thought "Game."

The East Liverpool High School has a campus where the students are allowed to meet for their games after school hours, [illegible] the evening. Here, after dark, the [illegible] many [illegible] ties on [illegible] vied with each other [illegible] that they were "game."

Toward [illegible] one night in the last [illegible] of [illegible], John Green and Percy Wells were [illegible] through the campus [illegible] their way home from an evening frolic [illegible] the street when strong hands suddenly seized them from behind, while rough voices cried in their ears:

"How dare you kids appear on the campus at this [illegible]"

John and Percy made no efforts to free themselves. They expected the same kind of rough treatment they had already received on more than one occasion—being ridden on a rail or forced to make the circuit of the campus on their hands and knees, or something of that sort—and made a virtue of [illegible] themselves to it with good grace. But the next remark from one of their captors rather startled them.

"Boys, these kids are too fresh. Moderate measures seem to make no impression on them. What shall be their fate?"

"We must make an example of them," said another voice.

"They must die," exclaimed another.

Without more ado the victims were gagged and blindfolded with handkerchiefs and rudely hustled out of the campus, through the deserted streets and along the country road. They stopped for ten or fifteen minutes beside the road when John and [illegible] the footsteps of other [illegible] who were [illegible] the pa[illegible] and heard [illegible]

"Have you got the ropes?"

"Yes," was the answer. Whereupon the two victims, frightened now and trembling [illegible] were hustled over the road faster than before. At length they felt [illegible] Then [illegible] and the handkerchiefs were taken from their eyes. Now for the first time they realized that there had been a [illegible] to capture and punish them. [illegible] of their captors was to [illegible] to which they bound them [illegible] by feet and hands [illegible] ropes which [illegible] had brought [illegible]

In [illegible] John and Percy begged [illegible] they reminded their captors that a train was due in half an hour their tormentors only laughed and began to dance and sing about them, now and then giving them a brutal kick. At length the leader said:

"You too kids deserve to die. You are not properly respectful to your superiors. You set a bad example for other little boys. If it is possible we would like to [illegible] your reformation — we would like to make men of you. If you are ever to become men show yourselves worthy to associate with us, your superiors. By the use of your own wits and strength break the ropes that bind you and escape. Otherwise you die under the wheels of the first train that passes."

At the end of this cruel speech the captors pledged themselves to do nothing to aid the release of either of the boys. Then, with a final kick for each victim, they strolled heartlessly away.

Percy Wells lay bound to his rail, nearly fainting from terror, but John Green, an exceptionally hardy and muscular boy, exerting all his strength, managed to work [illegible]e hand free and then to untie the ropes that bound his other hand and his feet. Then, finding himself so weak and nervous that he could make no impression on the knots that bound his companion, he sped away toward town for assistance.

He dashed through the hazing party, which separated and fled in all directions on recognizing him, and rushed to the house of his aunt, a quarter of a mile away. He called to her for help before reaching her door. He could hardly speak when she appeared, but he motioned toward the railroad, and she hurried back with him to the scene of the outrage.

They found poor Percy raving like a maniac and beating his head on the iron rail, which was already vibrating under the wheels of the approaching train. Before the gleam of the headlight was upon them, J[illegible] helpless [illegible] nothing b[illegible] fingers were [illegible] weak to untie.

Feverishly the brave woman tore at the ropes, but [illegible] until the locomotive was with[illegible] yards of her that the now sens[illegible] was free, and she had dragged [illegible] off the rail as the train th[illegible] Then she fell in a faint.

A tra[illegible] ning along ten minutes la[illegible] the woman still unconscious, [illegible] two boys were babbling like [illegible] still loosely fastened [illegible] told the story.

The t[illegible] managed to revive John Green s[illegible] to enable him to tell [illegible] was now in almost the [illegible]. He could do [illegible] the knots which his the main features of the outrage. T[illegible] reviving the woman, he found assistance and conveyed her and the boys to their homes.

Both boys had to be placed in the care of physicians. For several days it was feared that Percy Wells would never regain his reason. Day and night he would have fits of raving, during which he seemed to live over again that awful half hour in which, each moment, he seemed to feel iron wheels crunching the life out of his body.

As in previous instances of the most inhuman form of hazing, both boys strictly denied knowledge of the identity of their tormentors.

"You heard their voices," they were told "you must have known absolutely in your own mind whose voices they were—voices which you had heard nearly every day in the school grounds."

All such questions were useless. John Green and Percy Weeks proved their boyish, though mistaken loyalty by their silence. They had not even a suspicion who had so nearly brought them to their death.

The High School authorities employed detectives and made every effort to place the guilt where it belonged, being determined to bring the culprits to justice irrespective of the influence of their families. But the detectives learned nothing. Another set of these youthful demons had been saved by the spirit of loyalty upon which they have learned they can so perfectly depend.

The sad case of Stuart L. Pierson showed that even the father of a dead victim may be influenced by the same spirit which seals the lips of schoolboys in the event of such outrages. He had been [illegible]ted to the same D K E to which his [illegible] had been sacrificed. He hastened [illegible] cover up every bit of evidence which might disclose the identity of his son's murderers.

Young Pierson, whose pledge to the members of his fraternity is quoted above, was a freshman of the little college of Kenyon, O. On being admitted to the fraternity of the Delta Kappa Epsilon it filled him with pride to remember that, students and alumni, its roll numbered more than five thousand members, of whom his father was one, and all being forever loyal to their vows.

He accepted hazing as the natural and long-established privilege of upper classmen. He made no struggle when they took him out on the railway bridge at Gambier, O., and bound him to the track. When they left him there he probably tried to free himself; probably those struggles became frantic when he heard the wheels approaching and saw the locomotive headlight. But spite of all that agony, had he managed to escape, it is certain that he never would have betrayed his cruel comrades.

Young Pierson had no chance to escape. There on the bridge the ropes still held his mangled remains to the rails when they were found and the Coroner took charge of them. At the inquest the father appeared and opposed every stage of the investigation which tended to show that his boy had been tied to the tracks by his companions in college. He declared that the hazing had not gone beyond compelling his son to "stand guard" on the bridge—that he had simply fallen asleep at his post and been run down by the train.

All this, though the father knew that his son was still so weak and sore from recent beating with stones and clubs that he was hardly able to crawl out of bed, when, with the elder Pierson's consent, he was taken to the bridge and bound to the railroad track.

It was planned to release the boy, the father knew, before the regular train came along. When the fatal passage of an unscheduled train turned these plans into deliberate homicide, the father helped the culprits to smuggle the body to Cincinnati and to otherwise befog the authorities.

But the ropes found on the rails, and the story of another freshman how he had narrowly escaped the same fate, convinced the community that the boy's own comrades were guilty and through them really every member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

That this same extremity of ruffianism should now extend even to High School students in this practice of the former harmless and amusing custom of hazing—as the affair at East Liverpool, Ohio, indicates is a startling revelation of the increasing brutality and heartlessness among school boys.

For The Horse Show

By

Creator Of Fashions For The Fashionable Women Of America

Gowns for the Horse Show Will Be Richer, but More Simple in Effect Than Ever Before. While the Evening Gowns to Be Worn Will Be Much More Elaborate Than Anything Yet Seen, and Will Introduce the New Half-Decolletage.

WHILE conveying an effect of simplicity coupled with costly elegance, gowns for the Horse Show will be richer in materials and make this year, yes, even than ever before. A most admirable example of a smart gown to wear at the Horse Show in the evening is shown in figure A.

This gown is of white broadcloth elaborated with Irish and point lace, than which two greater contrasts could hardly be found. It is built upon a closely fitted foundation of taffeta silk made in princess style and finished at the bottom with a knife plaited ruffle.

The bodice has a stock and upper chemisette portion of princess lace mingled with point. Panels of Irish lace are set over each shoulder and terminate in points on the front and back of the bodice, framing let-in pieces of contrasting laces and from which hang small pointed panels of Princess lace. A front panel of Irish lace extends all the way from the chemisette to the edge of the gown, narrowing at the waist line and broadening across the bust and above the feet.

B—Empire Gown in modified style.

D—A striking gown of pink velvet with brocaded decorations, a fur bodice trimming and lace.

A very effective panel of lace begins under the arm, spreads over the hip and divides into two very deep points, one extending down the front and the other down the back of the hip. These insertions make the dress fit well at the top, and the points are finished half way down the skirt with silk tassels. As may be understood, guipure and other heavy laces may be effectively employed in place of Irish crochet.

Across the front and back of the waist a wide silk girdle is set between the side panels of lace.

The skirt is long in front and has a round train. In the back of the bodice transparent lace forms a V, from collar to girdle, outlined at the top by the overlapping panels of heavy and transparent laces.

Medium sized puffed sleeves are of point lace with application of sprays of forget-me-nots in the same lace. A cuff of princess over Irish lace has a strap of Irish lace extending above it up the back of the sleeve, and the same heavy lace forms the under part of the cuff.

As may be noticed, the sleeves are longer than sleeves of evening gowns have hitherto been made, being on the order of three-quarter length sleeves.

One of the innovations of the season will be gowns of half decolletage at the Horse Show in the evening, at the theatre and at restaurant dinners. All one need do to this gown to convert it into half decolletage is to make the stock and top of the chemisette separate, so that it can be removed at will.

To make a "perfectly stunning" afternoon gown on this model, build it in canary yellow, biscuit color, mauve or mustard color. In all black this would be a very handsome gown. Needless to say that the lace which trims it must be dyed to match the color of the gown.

While this is made with skirt and bodice, it maintains princess lines in the soft merging of the outline of the bodice into that of the skirt. The dress also emphasizes the advent of bodices which fit closely to the figure and are built upon clinging and not loose linings.

Flesh pink velvet is the material used in the gown shown in figure D. It is long all around and trained in the back and is embellished with a large design of fleur-de-lys in silk brocade upon a velvet gown. This design is repeated over the entire fabric of the skirt and bodice. No other trimmings break the flowing lines of the full gathered skirt, which is finished at the bottom with a blind facing.

The bodice is made in surplice fashion, which shows to advantage its elaboration, the surplice coming down in a pointed front and to the waist line in the back. Both decolletage and surplice edges are bordered with chinchilla fur. This fur, by the way, can be so skilfully imitated that one can rarely tell without careful examination the real from the imitation.

Chinchilla also forms a band that confines a lace puff in the top of the sleeves. Below this puff are two deep flounces of lace above another puff caught to a lace cuff. The decolletage is bordered by a lace ruffle.

Plenty of women will sigh: I can't get a flesh-pink velvet gown enriched as this one is!" True. But think of all the soft materials you can get in colors that become you and which may be made in exactly this style with passementerie or handmade decorative designs of some inexpensive character. Bowknots and roses made of shirred strips of silk and velvet are inexpensive trimmings, and there is a fad for trimming gowns with the effective handmade Marie Antoinette lace designs which many women can quickly make. This paper gave a lesson on making Marie Antoinette lace not long ago.

Chenille embroideries, too, are quickly worked and are among the season's fashionable trimmings.

Figure C is another of the attractive gowns which one will see at the Horse Show. Elaborately as it is built and garnished, the dress still maintains an air of simple elegance which helps to make it still more admirable. This dress is of black chiffon made up over a white taffeta slip cut in princess style. At the waist the chiffon is caught in close pin tucks that give a slender waist line to the gown, and insure its fitting well to the figure.

The top of the bodice is of point lace, without stock or collar. Upon the lace the bodice comes up in deep Van Dyke points outlined with bands of panne velvet. On each side the bodice front an additional band of velvet from the shoulder forms an oblong frame, inside of which is outlined an elaborate design in sequins. The top of the point in front of the bodice is decorated with a large jet ornament and the bottom of the points on the sides are finished with ornaments and pendants formed of sequins.

Quite a charming decorative design is carried out in the sleeve. Its upper portion is adorned with acanthus leaves and foliage designs wrought with sequins, and embellished with insets of white lace, the whole forming a very rich effect, which is heightened by the solid rows of sequins around the middle of the sleeve. This is puffed above a deep cuff of panne velvet, decorated with a lace inset and handsome jet ornaments. A jet butterfly enriches the back of the bodice below the point of its lace yoke, and jet pendants complete the back at the waist line.

From the pin tucks in its top the skirt falls full. It has around its bottom edge a broad band of chiffon velvet, above which glitters a narrow band of irregular outline, formed of sequins. This irregularity of outline upon the upper edge is due to the pattern of a big, graceful design carried out in bands of panne velvet intermingled with handsome embroideries in sequins showing foliage patterns.

This gown suggests itself in colors, such as copper tints, blues, greens, reds and yellows. Where one could not afford to have all the handwork in sequins done, ready-made sequined net and passementerie designs might be employed. Of course, nothing ever takes the place of original designs in hand embroideries.

To convert this striking gown into one for evening wear where full dress is necessary, one has only to cut down the neck and abbreviate the sleeves.

A charming example of the modified Empire gown is shown in figure B. It has an Empire front, which yet follows the lines of the figure, while the back has a jacket finish.

This gown is a good example of an afternoon gown for the Horse Show. It may be made of velvet, velveteen or cloth, and, if intended for other uses and occasions, lighter weights of materials may be made up in the same manner.

The bolero jacket front of the gown is pointed in the neck and worn without a stock. This jacket has a scalloped collar, trimmed with rows of gold braid and little buttons. The collar ends in a point above a decorative design of the material, cut out in little straps edged with gold braid, and with an embroidered figure in the end of each strap, two figures alternating in the design. Silk rings are set on each edge of this decorated front panel, which opens over a vest, which falls below in two overlapping and elaborate front panels.

The little vest top has an edge of point lace ruffling above a silver band. Overlapping the silver fold is the edge of the heavy lace vest. The lace panels of the vest are heavy in quality and rich in effect, and are laid upon chiffon. Silver edging in points finishes the scallop with which each terminates. They hang directly over the seam of the front of the skirt.

A striking feature of the bolero jacket is the outer sleeve, which forms part of the jacket and has no dividing line from it. Seven small tucks begin under the collar and extend along the shoulder into the top of the sleeve at the shoulder line. This upper sleeve hangs over a puff of point lace which, in turn, disappears beneath an upturned ruffle of cloth which is tacked to the lace. A cuff and wrist ruffle of point lace finish this quite elaborate sleeve. The cuff is decorated with medallions of cloth and velvet embroidered by hand and which form an unusual decoration upon lace.

Three large tucks begin under the front panel of the bolero jacket and slope around toward the back, reaching the waist line on the hip and terminating in points on each side of the back.

At the top of the back there are rows of pin tucks crossing from shoulder to shoulder below the collar. These terminate in the tops of the sleeves and are a continuation of the group along the shoulder. There is a seam down the middle of the jacket back with a pleat from the waist line on each side of it. Double box pleats form short, square coat tails, which, upon the waist line, are decorated with medallions and buttons.

The Empire skirt has a distinct feature in the front gores, which come to a point at the bust and slope down to the waist

Thrilling Novel of Mystery, Tragedy and Stolen Fortune

By Eden Phillpotts and Arnold Bennett.

Synopsis of Previous Chapters.

Philip Masters, a gentleman in distress, is receiving a night watchman on Kingsway, London, when he sees a figure crawl out of a house and step in a trench. The next morning the murdered body of Captain Pollexfen, a retired sea captain, is found in the trench. The house is called the Corner House and is kept by Adrian Hilgay, who furnishes lodging to distressed gentlefolk only at 12 cents a night. Philip meets an old friend, Sir Anthony Didring, from whom he wins two hundred and fifty pounds, which relieves his necessities.

He is then summoned to attend the inquest on the captain's body and falls under suspicion. A negro cook furnishes the important information that the dead captain had only two relatives—a brother with whom he quarrelled and a daughter named Giralda on the stage. Mrs. Caroline Upottery, the captain's next door neighbor at the Corner House, creates a sensation by deposing that she was engaged to him.

John Meredith, another Corner House lodger, now becomes a central figure in the story. Masters had seen the blind of his window raised in the morning of the tragedy. He is at present an unfathomable factor in the situation.

Mr. Varcoe, a celebrated Scotland Yard detective, seems on the point of unveiling the mystery, when he disappears in the Corner House itself.

Philip Masters obtains a commission to investigate the mystery from the Courier newspaper. He makes the startling discovery that two hundred pound notes in his possession once belonged to the dead captain, finds that Sir Anthony Didring obtained them from Josephine Fire, the comic opera prima donna, and hastens off to question her about them. The mystery of "Mr. Meredith's" behavior is partly explained by the discovery that he is really Giralda.

From Giralda he learns that the Captain's wild brother, Walter Pollexfen, had threatened the dead man with terrible consequences if he did not divide his fortune with him. They decide that the mysterious "Mrs. Upottery" is Walter Pollexfen, and Philip starts in search of him.

They dine together and on their return find Mrs. Upottery has departed. Philip leaves Giralda and starts in pursuit.

CHAPTER XIX.

Mrs. Appleby as Machiavelli.

PHILIP'S rash disappearance into Poplar, and his mysterious capture, and the strange message, each contributed to throw new light on existence for Tony. He would have thought such occurrences impossible had he merely read of them; but now, with the bent platter on his mantlepiece, he went to the other extreme and thought them entirely natural and began to fancy that life was made up of similar episodes. Despite protests, he had rushed off with Oxwich in the motor car to Poplar before lunch. But he had discovered naught, the widow Upottery having, of course, contrived not to leave behind her tracks crude enough to be perceived by the Sir Anthony's of this world. He had also run to earth the owner of the White Rose, who had nothing to tell him, saw that the yacht had been chartered by an individual named Smythe, whose address was the General Post Office. He had further communicated with the police, and the police had received him coldly and incredulously, promising without enthusiasm to examine his report in due course. The police being aware that Philip had turned journalist and not having gathered much comfort from his article in the Morning Courier, were scarcely disposed to put themselves about because he had vanished, or, as they hinted, pretended to vanish.

"Go after him, eh?" said Sir Anthony, jumping up from the sofa. "That's an idea. Something's certainly got to be done. What's the name of the line that runs to the West Indies, Royal Mail, isn't it? I'll ring for tea." And he rang. Oxwich entered instantly, the man was never far from the door during a crisis. "Oxwich. Telephone to the Royal Mail Line offices and find out when the next steamer goes to the West Indies."

"I have already found out, Sir Anthony," replied Oxwich. "There is a complete list of steamship sailings downstairs. Next Saturday week, sir. A boat left Southampton only the day before yesterday."

"Thank you."

Oxwich withdrew, having added one her atom to the coral reef of his reputation.

"That's nearly a fortnight," said Sir Anthony, dashed.

"But you can hire a yacht, dear," said Mrs. Appleby, imperturbably smoothing out the flounces of her striking dress.

"Can I?"

"Why, of course, dearest! And in a yacht you can go where you like."

"How do you hire the yachts?" Tony demanded, his imagination getting a new fillip.

"I—I don't know," said Mrs. Appleby. "You just hire them. I expect it's quite simple—like hiring a salmon river, or a moor or a special train. I dare say you could hire a nice large yacht. One that nobody would be sea sick on. I don't mean one of those sailing things. I mean a steam yacht, with electric light, and a cow on board."

Sir Anthony sank once more.

"Oxwich," he said, "get me Kelly's Directory from somewhere. I want the names and addresses of some yacht brokers."

"Yes, sir," Oxwich agreed, and then after a majestic pause, "Perhaps one of the yacht newspapers might be more useful, sir."

"Just so, exactly."

"That man of yours is a pearl," Mrs. Appleby observed.

"He understands me," Tony agreed nonchalantly.

And presently the baronet was reading aloud from The Yachting World:

"Six hundred and fifty ton (about) steam yacht, built 189— to Lloyd's highest class. Length W. L., 202 feet; beam 28 feet; draught, 14¼ feet. Every convenience and comfort. Large shade deck, drawing room, dining-room and smoking-room on main deck, with intercommunication. Eight staterooms, electric light, steam heating, steam steering gear, steamlaunch, speed up to 13 knots, recently passed special survey. Exceptionally well found. Suitable for long voyages. Ample bunker capacity. Ready at once. Lying Tilbury. Price very low—a bargain. Also for charter. Sole agents. Boyds, Malincourt House, Piccadilly, W. National Telephone 6969 Gerrard."

"It is precisely what you need, dearest," said Mrs. Appleby, "if only it has a pretty name."

"Miss Pollexfen," Tony burst out suddenly, dropping the paper, "you do not say anything."

"I—I—what am I to say?" Mary murmured.

"You see," Mrs. Appleby added quickly in a matter-of-fact tone, unable any longer to keep her cards off the table, "Horace and I could go with you, to keep you company. The voyage would be such a good thing for Horace. And besides his health, it would be such an education for him, wouldn't it?"

"Oh!" exclaimed Tony, who found himself still receiving shocks.

And Mrs. Appleby calmly continued: "Miss Pollexfen might also go, as our guest. I am sure you must be very solicitous, dear Miss Pollexfen, about the fate of this brave young man who is running such risks on your behalf."

Mrs. Appleby's spirit of enterprise was breath-taking. It brought a blush to Mary's cheek, but no words to Mary's tongue.

"And there's another point," proceeded Mrs. Appleby. "If Miss Pollexfen stays in England, her whereabouts are certain to become known, and she would be worried to death by detectives and things."

"Miss Pollexfen," Tony asked her. "What do you say?"

"It is extremely kind of you," Mary managed to reply. "I don't know what to"——

Tony nerved himself. "It depends on you," he said.

"If it depends on me," she answered in a new firm voice, with a decisive gesture, "I will go."

Tony rang the bell.

"Oxwich, put me on to 6969 Gerrard."

When he came back from telephoning, Mary Pollexfen was alone in the drawing room, Mrs. Appleby having departed to convey delicious possibilities to her offspring.

"I'm going down to see Boyds at once," said Tony, flushed with his own importance. The potentialities of a fortune of £400,000 had been more fully than ever revealed to the young man that afternoon. A steam yacht. It seemed strange to him that the sublime notion of a steam yacht had never before crossed his mind. He was drunk with the scheme.

Mary stood up. "You are very very good," she replied, with deep feeling. And suddenly the atmosphere changed for Tony. The fact that Philip Masters was in [illegible] danger became somehow intensely [illegible] him.

"Not at all. You know Phil is a great pal of mine."

"And supposing you go—we go, what [illegible] you do when you get out there [illegible]?"

"[illegible] will depend. We may have to [illegible] the local po[illegible]"

"[illegible] nothing terrible will happen," Mary breathed.

"Why do you imagine such things?"

"Because I have been thinking [illegible] something in that hidden treasure story of the negro Coco's after all. And if money is concerned and [illegible] stopped [illegible]"

"Do you know," cried Tony, "[illegible] what I've been thinking—I mean about the treasure. As for risks. How can there be any risk? Why Phil should be carried off to a place like Grenada, I can't imagine. But we'll find him. I tell you what—it wouldn't be a bad plan to get hold of Marse Coco and hear him talk, eh? He might be useful."

"I should like to very much," Mary answered. "He was my poor father's friend, the only friend he had, I think." The voice almost broke.

And Tony, as he called briskly for his hat and overcoat, had a dim vague sense of the [illegible] quality of the whole adventure. And he perceived Mary as a tragic and remote figure far above, not for him, in a sphere of emotions utterly different from his. Such [illegible] vain, good natured men have at times [illegible] glimpses.

"He perceived Mary as a tragic, remote figure far above, not for him."

CHAPTER XX.

Travels in London

AFTER quitting Mary Pollexfen in Kingsway, Philip Masters did not reach Poplar on the S[illegible] evening without a considerable amount of difficulty. Like many Londoners, he knew not his London. He had probably never in his life been further east than Aldgate. It is doubtful if he ever knew the "Three Nuns." He hailed a hansom just north of St. Clement Danes, and remarked airily to the cabman:

"Cotton street, Poplar, No. 7."

The No. 7 was d[illegible]

"Not me," said the cabman.

"What's it [illegible]," Philip inquired, trying to look g[illegible]

"It ain't worth nothing," the cabman replied. "I'm not going to Poplar tonight, guv'nor. I['ll] drive you to Aldgate, if you like."

Philip a[ccepted]. At Aldgate, where he already fe[lt] [illegible] in a foreign land, or rather in a hostile country strongly held by an enemy, where he didn't know even the exterior of the churches, where the streets were full of trams instead of crawling [illegible], [illegible] was with a certain sinking of the heart that he saw his own vehicle van[ish]. He ought to have been content with a [illegible], but he lacked skill in the lore of London travel, and loitered about for another hansom. Fortune favored him.

"Cotton street, Poplar," he said to the driver, wisely leaving out the No. 7 on this occasion.

And to his despair and disgust the cabman replied, "Not me, guv'nor."

"[illegible] far, is it?" Philip questioned, somewhat wistfully.

"It's further than I'm going this blessed [illegible]," said the cabman. "I['ll] take you [to] Stepney Station if you like. That's just in the radius."

Once more Philip accepted.

The cab penetrated further and further into regions Caesar never knew. It followed a thoroughfare wider than anything Philip had seen outside Paris, but, as regards its characteristics, ineffably depressing. And the thoroughfare was eternal. Time after time it had the air of reaching the end of the world, and then it made up its mind to proceed further. Philip had not beheld in thirty years as many sad eyed, ill dressed, plain people as passed the windows of the cab in thirty minutes. There were plenty of public houses, all resembling each other so exactly that they might have been bought at some wholesale store of public houses and put down there at regular intervals, signs and everything complete, but there was not a single decent restaurant—using the word "decent" in Philip's sense—nor a single building that met his eye in a friendly manner.

Then the mean lights of Stepney Station appeared, and Philip was obliged to descend again unescorted in the hostile country. He was geographically so lost that he knew not [illegible] from west. He had heard of Stepney [illegible] as a district owning a bishop; he might have been in Strasburg, Staffa or St[illegible]

"How do I go on from here?" he asked the cabman respectfully.

And the cabman looked down on him from his box. "Any of these trams," said the cabman. "I don't know as they goes to Cotton street, but they goes to Poplar."

"Is it much further?"

"I should say it's a tidy step."

He boarded a tram which he ought to have boarded at Aldgate.

The conductor actually knew Cotton street, and Philip, enheartened, regarded him as a man and a brother. The tram was a leisurely apparatus. The entire population of Stepney and Poplar seemed to get in and out of it about three times. It passed churches and manufactories. It crossed water by means of bridges, and Philip saw the masts of ships dimly against the night sky. He also saw now and then, when the tram stopped, posters on the walls in languages of which he could not make out a single character. Then the tram drew up at another large railway station and a couple of hundred yards further on the conductor tipped him a familiar wink.

"'Ere y'are," said the conductor.

And Philip had to descend, had to leave his sole acquaintance in that desolate region. The strange Oriental odor of the [illegible] remained with him.

Just as he had heard of Stepney, so he had heard of Poplar, and he was in it. His own London seemed to be in another hemisphere. Close by was a curious church and its clock struck 12 just as Philip was hesitating at the corner of East India Dock road and Cotton street.

He remembered that Giralda, too, had been down there, all alone, and he whistled in order to create in himself a feeling of manliness. In less than a minute he stood in front of No. 7. So far as he could judge in the obscurity of the badly lit street it was a house unutterably mean and melancholy. A light was burning in the hall, as a light had been burning in the hall of the Corner House on just such an evening. He went up the two steps and knocked loud and bold.

A rather short, firmly built man opened the door.

"I want to see Mrs. Upottery," Philip said at once. He had no intention of raising the point whether or not Mrs. Upottery lived there, or had lived there.

The man seemed to hesitate.

"Yes, Mrs. Upottery."

"We don't want any friends of Mrs. Upottery here," said the man in a tone of finality. "A nice time of night to come waking people up."

"I'm not a friend of Mrs. Upottery, mate," Philip protested. "But I've got to speak to her."

"Well, she ain't [illegible]"

"When will she [illegible]?"

"She won't be [illegible]. At least I hope not. She turned this house upside down. She's made forty times more mess than she's worth. And she ain't paid her bill properly. If my mother had her here she'd claw her blooming eyes out for her, that's what she'd do. And quick!"

The man was furious against Mrs. Upottery. He made as if to close the door, but Philip put his foot in it, at the same time holding out half a crown, which glinted in the feeble light.

"See here, mate," said he persuasively. "If that's any use to you it's yours. I'd like to have a bit of a chat with you. I shan't keep you two minutes. But I've got most particular reasons for meeting with Mrs. Upottery, and I'm no more a friend of hers than you are."

The man's hand fidgetted toward the half crown, and then his fingers closed on it, and he opened the door wider. Without waiting for an invitation, Philip slipped inside the house. A candle burned crookedly in a pewter stick on a deal table. The sides of the passage were shiny with grease, and the floor was of no special color or substance. Philip's eyes interrogated the man's. He was shabbily dressed, but not extremely so. He wore a cap, and a leather belt showed under his waistcoat. His face was pale. At first he gave the impression of being young, but this impression passed; he might have been almost any age.

"What do you want to know?" he asked gruffly.

"You say Mrs. Upottery's been kicking up a dust here. What about?"

"How do I know what about? I only know as she's going as stewardess, or something, on a yacht. But if you ask me, she's a queer lot. What surprises me is that the police ain't been after her. If she ain't a jailbird, then I never seen one. And I seen a few, too."

"A yacht?"

"Yes. I did hear she was bound for the West Indies—Grenada—Grand Etang—damned if I can recollect the names. But the old woman's been jabbering about Grand Etang ever since she came in tonight."

"Where is she now?"

"She's gone down to the yacht with her bundle."

Philip was immensely interested.

"Where's the yacht?"

Philip thought a moment.

"Far from here?" he questioned.

"No, not that far."

"If you'll come out and take me there at once," said Philip, feeling in his pocket, "there's five shillings for you."

"I'll do it," said the man promptly. "Come on."

They went outside instantly and the man banged the door. He led the way down Cotton street, Philip following. They crossed Poplar High street, and soon Philip found himself floundering over lines of railway amid little groups of loaded wagons with a red signal here and there in the distance. The man walked fast and never looked behind. The route lay over uneven ground; all was strange, exotic and full of sinister romance. Then some sheds loomed up, and a warehouse. The man passed along an entry lighted by an oil lamp.

"Look out," he said at last.

Philip saw lights. He stood on a wharf. The vast and heaving Thames lay astonishingly before him with the shipping of the world on its broad bosom. Two steamers were alongside, and into one of them a steam crane, with an incredible thunderous rattle and screech was pouring bulky packages. Men cried to one another between the ship and wharf. Philip's guide walked up the wharf to a long, sloping gangway that gave access to the other steamer. Philip observed the name "White Rose" on a dirty gray life buoy. A thin smoke was oozing from the funnel. A solitary lantern showed from the mast. The guide crossed the gangplank, Philip at his heels. And as Philip gained the deck of the mysterious steamer he paused a moment to take in the scene, with its wide water, its tarry, oily odor of ships, its gliding, spectral lights, and its weird sounds. The very air smelt of the sea. This was London. This was the city of Piccadilly Circus and the Alcazar, and the Devonshire Mansion.

"Down here," the man called, indicating a companion ladder, but he remembered nothing else for quite a long time.

CHAPTER XXI.

Uncle Walter Manages Better.

WHEN his senses became once more available for the uses of his existence he was at first aware of nothing except a feeling of fatigue and petulance. It seemed to him that he was like a cross and sickly child who had a comprehensive quarrel with the universe. Then he began to notice other interesting things, as that he was lying on his back on some soft substance, and that there was a small circle of faint radiance in front of him to his right. He tried lazily to move his arms, and he could not; then his legs, and he could not. Then he renewed the attempt with increased force, still without result. This made him angry. He struggled hard, was conscious of pain in his ankles and wrists, and muttered,

"I'm tied down."

Thenceforward his memory recovered very rapidly. He recalled all that had passed up to the moment of descending the companion. He put two and two ingeniously together, despite a wandering pain in his head. The thought flashed through his brain like a scientific discovery that classifies and explains a whole series of differing facts.

The United States to Breed More Perfect Men and Women.

Pierre Delenne. From an examination of ten thousand faces of married people he finds that on the average they unmistakably follow the law of contrasts. The man with a large forehead and small chin seeks the woman with a small forehead and a large chin. The large man admires the small woman, the blond man the brunette woman and vice versa. The man with an aquiline nose adores the girl with a retrousse nose. No mental or physical feature plays anything like so great a part in the attraction of the sexes as the shape of the face. The union of two persons having the same type of face is the commonest cause of unhappy marriages.

This law of human nature has been made the basis of an exceedingly successful marriage bureau by M. Delenne.

If a woman subscribes to his bureau M. Delenne demands her very latest profile photograph, and also, if possible, a full view picture, though the latter is not so important. From the picture a profile tracing is taken and transferred carefully to a card together with her age, height, address, nationality, accomplishments and such bits of her past as would be of greatest interest to a putative husband.

On the card is printed an outline of the standard Greek profile. The woman's profile is superimposed upon the Greek and the differences at once become evident. By a card index system the cards are filed away according to their greatest departures from the Greek standard. Then by means of a cross reference system the minor differences can be hunted up. Men are taken care of in the same manner, their cards being kept separate from those of the women.

Trained clerks keep running over the sets of cards looking for opposites. Sometimes an opposite can't be found for some card. Then the applicant is compelled to wait. If no opposites come in and the applicant becomes impatient, the bureau takes a chance on a "half opposite" and sends him or her some photographs.

In this case the bureau picks out somebody who has the reverse of the applicant's two predominating features, though the rest of the face may not be a good opposite. The applicant is sure to be interested, but satisfaction to the extent of matrimony is not sure. In fact the bureau knows it is "substituting goods" and would prefer to wait if possible for a more perfect opposite.

The round faced type with short but deep nose, wide-opened eyes and non prominent chin, has most difficulty in finding mates among the French people because this type of face goes with the brachycephalic skull. The brachycephalic or short skull is increasing rapidly among the French. For this reason the thin "hatchet face" type which goes with the long or dolichocephalic skull is in great demand on account of its scarcity because it is the opposite of the more plentiful type.

To all people who are thinking of marriage in spite of obstacles, such as poverty, opposition of the parents, difference in ages or any other thing that might make it unusually advisable to know how enduring their affection is likely to be, the following test is recommended:

Take the most recent profile photograph you can get of the person to be passed upon and get a tracing of his profile. This you can do whether you have any gift for drawing or not. All you need is a pencil and a sheet of tracing paper. Place the profile over a profile drawing of an ideal face, like that of the Countess of Warwick. Draw in the ideal face with a fine pen.

It will be bound to fall on one side or the other of the profile you are testing, sometimes, perhaps, crossing it. If it is a very irregular face it may cross the ideal several times. Let us say that it falls entirely on the left side [illegible]. Now trace a second face on the [illegible] two by following a line that fa[illegible] the right side of the standard [illegible] fell on the left. Where the lines [illegible] horizontal, as under the brow [illegible] the lines of the second f[illegible] to be as far above the standard as [illegible] was below, and vice versa [illegible] give the profiles of a couple of [illegible] faces; contrasting, in that they [illegible] by equal and opposite amounts [illegible] assumed standard of beauty. Th[illegible] face should be yours or vers[illegible] or you will not make an idea[illegible] according to M. Delenne.

The U[illegible] States officials may take account of [illegible] rious law of contrasts. [illegible] for they [illegible] expect to obtain the perfect man [illegible] the principles of mutual attraction [illegible] into consideration as well as [illegible] as health, strength and intelle[illegible]

It is [illegible] scientific men that the principles [illegible] are learned from the study of [illegible] may in some degree throw light on the development of the human organism [illegible] original germs of life in the p[illegible] the animal are apparently the same. [illegible] Professor Luther Burbank, the wizard of Santa Rosa, Cal., who has performed [illegible] with vegetables, believes that his d[illegible] es will be of great value in [illegible] the human body. Professor Burbank [illegible] with a cactus without its prickly [illegible] is affording food for cattle in the desert; a plant which bears [illegible] its branches and potatoes b[illegible] ground; a fruit which grows [illegible] of the largest plum and has t[illegible] of the finest plum, and yet is w[illegible] stone; a giant combination of the raspberry and the blackberry that [illegible] each in size and flavor, and many [illegible] specially developed fruits, plants [illegible] vegetables which are equally wond[illegible]

Mr. B[illegible] declares that the chief importance he attaches to his work is that it may point the way to some improvement in man. Recently he said:

"I care but little for these weeds, these flowers and these trees, only as they afford me opportunities to show what can be [illegible] directing natural forces.

"My hope is that what I am doing to show how the natural forces may be guided in the finest specimens of each species of plants will be adopted by those in charge of the young life of the children.

"A plant is responsive to only a few influences, such as are found in the soil, sunshine and rain, but a child is infinitely responsive.

"Weeds are weeds because they are cropped, trampled upon, burned by fierce heat, tormented by innumerable pests, or perhaps permitted to suffer from cold, wet feet.

"There is not a weed in the whole realm of nature that, if given proper nourishment and sunshine, will not grow up into a beautiful and useful plant.

"The undeveloped, dwarfed, diminutive and broken specimens of the human kind are such simply because they have grown up without having the elements which environed them and the possibilities to which their nature are related brought into touch and contact with them. The diminutive specimen of the daisy that we pass unnoticed has possibilities wrapped up in it of the magnificent schaster daisy; all that is necessary to turn the little, poverty-stricken daisy into the beautiful schaster is simply to touch the potentialities within it with the elements of its environments to which it is related."

All these experiments and all the valuable results which have been accomplished help us to understand the laws of life and therefore the laws by which the human body is developed. Under the direction of the United States Secretary of Agriculture the knowledge gathered from them will be applied directly to the creation of a perfect man.

A New Fan of Black Tissue in an Exquisite rose and White Cherry Design.

Fan with a Graceful Flight of Storks Against a Blue Ground with Ivory Traced Sticks.

Colonial Style Slipper of Black Suede, Ornamented with Gold Leaf in Japanese Design.

THE shops are full of the prettiest things. Yes, of course, they always are, but it does seem as if they never were quite so bewilderingly tempting as they are this Autumn. How old-fashioned and worn and musty does one's bag and pocketbook, though bought only last Spring look in comparison to the far lovelier designs that are just now on the market. How dowdy one's hats are, how ancient one's gloves, how utterly abominable is one's footgear. And, oh! how with just a deft new touch, a smart new conceit, a bit of an artist's imagination all the necessary little aids to a woman's toilette—the indispensable little touches that perfect the whole portrait—have become "impossible" and all these new dainties of fashion provoking, tantalizing; and so one must buy, buy, buy.

One of the richest and daintiest designs in coin or finger purses seen in the shops is a small wallet-shaped one of Oriental tapestry. It has an outside flap like a wallet. This flap is ornamented with an artistic design worked out in old filigree silver and set with cut amethysts and smoked pearls. This one little trifle alone is worth more than many women pay for an entire costume.

Another tempting little purse is a small bag of Persian tapestry in the beautiful soft Oriental tints that blend so exquisitely with one another. Soft pastel blues combined with rich terra-cotta reds and golden yellows give an artistic and enchanting effect in contrast to the top of dull silver set with large corals and richly ornamented with filigree and chasing. The chain is a silver chain of the regulation type that admits of being twined about the waist or fingers.

One of the unique things that is shown in Oriental purses is a flat book-shaped bag embroidered in Chinese bead work in a butterfly design. The beautiful multicolored spots and markings of the butterfly's wings admitted of a charming color scheme and this bag, though very costly in the original, may be copied at home by the nimble needle woman at a trifling expense. Of course one would have to either buy a frame or utilize the metal work of some old worn out leather bag. The sides of the bag should be worked on silk, which should be stretched over cardboard to give firmness to the sides. The handle could be worked on silk over an old strap if desired.

A piquant, pretty little slipper fit for Cinderella's tiny toes is made of black suede and its ornament is a Japanese design in real gold leaf stamped on the leather, the effect produced being very similar to black lacquer work with gold embossing. This slipper is cut in the colonial style, which is so universally becoming that its popularity has suffered no decrease from season to season, though each year has brought certain novelties in the detail of its shape or adornment. A few seasons ago the buckle was all important, but this season shows the rosette is first in favor. This coquettish-like rosette of course may be fashioned to suit any caprice of color or design.

Some people may be able to remember the time when children's shoes and boots were made with red heels, though that was long ago, as it is more than half a century since they were popular, but the fashion is being revived in ladies' slippers, and one of the most dashing modes in footwear of the present moment is the black patent leather slipper with trimmings and heels of red or gold. They are generally made in the plain sandal with rather high French heels. Everybody will remember Trix in Henry Esmond and the vision of her tiny feet tripping down the stairs in red heels.

Perhaps a fan is able to express poetically one's individuality more than any other article of a woman's toilette. It expresses not only one's tastes, but moods and caprices as well.

Surely no woman wishes to be thought lacking in originality in gowning, and the problem of finding something really different and odd in fans is even more difficult than in almost any other attribute of one's toilette. Of course only the very rich woman can afford to have a fan designed and made for her especial use with every gown, but for the woman of ordinary means who is tired of the regulation fans of spangled satin and net shown in the shops the beautiful imported Oriental fans offer a delightful opportunity to secure something at once novel and in smart good taste.

A fan that would be at once extremely useful and in perfect good taste with almost any costume is of black tissue embroidered in a rose and white cherry blossom design.

The beautiful sprays of the cherry stand out in strong relief against the black background. The sticks are of carved ivory, as white and dazzling as seafoam which had been congealed into intricate tracery of flower and leaf. From the handle a twin tassel of black silk falls in charming contrast to the brilliant ivory. It is a fan which would lend an air of subtle witchery to any costume, so suggestive is it of the far isles of sunny Nippon.

An exquisite design showing a flight of storks on a soft and delicate background of blue is certainly a poem in color harmony. The long slender necks and broad outstretched wings of the birds express a feeling of repose in movement and convey a sense of utmost restfulness.

As one mentally follows the flight of these birds of passage from those nearest in the foreground to those that sweep by in the far distance, one experiences a feeling of freedom such as is felt in watching a sea gull's flight. How few of our Occidental fans, though beautiful and dazzling, ever inspire any thought or suggest to us anything beyond the probable cost of the bauble.

The sticks of this fan are quite as ex[illegible] of frost [illegible] wrought by elfin fingers rather than the [illegible] of some little brown [illegible] of far [illegible].

Little Trifles So Tempting and Enticing Just Put Out in the Shops

For driving one of the smartest modes is the [illegible] glove. [illegible] stripes are shown [illegible] the glove [illegible] white kid, [illegible] some [illegible] are [illegible] they are not as [illegible] favor as [illegible].

A [illegible] very [illegible] in a [illegible] deep [illegible] laser [illegible] and [illegible] like a [illegible] is on [illegible] and the ends of [illegible] and [illegible] had to [illegible] the glove. By [illegible] of the glove can be [illegible]. This glove has [illegible] three corded stitching with [illegible] on the back of the glove.

The [illegible] of having the evening gloves of [illegible] embroidered in delicate colors to [illegible] the costume admits of many beautiful effects. Both long and short gloves are very dainty when treated in this manner.

A pair of short, two-button gloves with pearl clasps is embroidered in a design of pale blue flowers and delicate green leaves [illegible] exquisite taste. [illegible] of the wrist, about [illegible] worn [illegible] of the [illegible] regular tri[illegible].

Another pair of white [illegible] or riding gloves has [illegible] on the inside of the palm extending to the ends of the fingers.

This [illegible] the glove from wearing out [illegible] the strain of the [illegible] a better glove. The [illegible] of this glove is of the regulation type [illegible] stitching, and the glove is fastened at the wrist with one button [illegible].

A [illegible] driving glove has a white [illegible] with tan, with the palm [illegible] fingers of dark tan. This glove is not only extremely smart in effect, it is also very sensible, as the difficulty of [illegible] the glove from being [illegible] is avoided. This glove is also [illegible] mannish lines and fastened at the wrist with one button.

A pair of short gloves here shows a very novel idea in the introduction of deep pointed gores set in wide slashings at the side of the wrist. The gores are made of a contrasting shade of kid, such as gray, or light tan. The only fastening of this glove is a band of rubber elastic in the under side of the wrist, which gathers the glove snugly to the wrist. The back of these gloves has the regulation tri-stitching in clusters of three lines.

line at the side. The skirt top is entirely concealed by the jacket and its elaborations.

At the termination of the front seam straps, pointed at each end, occur on both sides of the seam. In their lower portions these straps are cut outward into small bars that are decorated in the ends with embroidered figures in two alternate designs, as upon the coat.

This strap decoration is repeated upon the side of the skirt, where the strap extends higher up and is single instead of [illegible].

This pattern of gown is charming and I do not need to impress my readers with the fact that they may trim with braid or other things than the trimmings here described and may use other materials and a simpler jacket for simple occasions. The skirt is not one likely to prove a success unless made by an experienced modiste.

Every woman hopes to attend the Horse Show, and some expect to go morning, noon and night. These all ask, "What shall I wear?"

First, remember that women are dressing more richly, but also more simply, than formerly. Quiet elegance is a good rule to dress by for this year's Horse Show.

A very good type of dress to wear in the morning is a coat and skirt suit, the skirt cut short and the coat made smartly and quite simply. For such a costume tweed is very proper. Striped tweed is new and is having quite a vogue, but plain tweed is just as suitable.

In new stripes one finds blue, green and brown combined with black. These three appear favorite hues abroad for combining with black, and the stripes come in several widths. Of course the color stripe gives the key to the color scheme of the costume and some very delightful effects in trimmings, hat, gloves and accessories may be achieved.

For the afternoon at the show a suitable gown would be one of velvet, velveteen or light cloth, made simply but as modishly as possible, and worn with rich furs.

In late years women have been dressing elaborately in the evening at the Horse Show, but this year they will dress more elaborately than ever before. The half decollete gown will make its appearance at the show in coloring, decoration and style in every way suited to the theatre and the restaurant dinner, where such dresses will be very fashionable his year.

Two distinct and striking novelties will be introduced at the Horse Show this season. They will be separate bodices, made in contrast to the skirt, and velvet skirts with separate bodices made in the fashion of a short bolero. This latter innovation is in deference to the Empire styles which demand short-waisted effects.

Another new fashion in which contrasts in costumes are introduced is the Directoire, in which the dainty Directoire coat and high-swathed bodice is of a color—and usually material—different from that of the skirt.

Directoire styles are very smart, indeed, if becomingly modified, and will be much worn in afternoon and evening gowns.

Almost, if not quite, as important as the Horse Show gown is the Horse Show hat. Every woman puts on her best hat for the Horse Show, and here one gets a very good idea of what well-gowned people consider good style in millinery.

A seductive hat of black velvet has the medium high crown which is now in vogue, with a medium brim tilted up on one side to form a point in front. Beginning at this point is a green, iridescent bird, with a long white plume for a tail. The plume curls allround the turned-up side of the brim and droops across the hair at the back and over to the right side. This is a very suitable hat to wear with the black chiffon costume shown on the same page, and could it be made in colored and with shaded plumes. This hat is worn tilted forward a bit

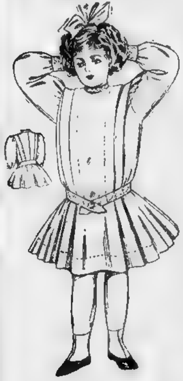
Sunday American-Journal-Examiner Pattern, No. 272.



THIS neat little pleated dress is one of the newest and prettiest of the models. It is ideal for general wear, and particularly appropriate for the wash fabrics. The garment is simply shaped by shoulder and under-arm seams, and deep pleats extending to the lower edge of the skirt and to the waistline in the back, give width to the little figure and add greatly to the style of the mode.

This little dress developed in white pique with belt and collar of embroidery is a very attractive one, but gingham, linen or the light-weight woollens will make up equally well. For a child of seven years 2¾ yards of 36-inch material will be required.

The patterns for this little dress have been cut in four sizes—3, 5, 7 and 9 years—and will be sent postpaid by return mail for 10 cents. Fill in the blank below, and mail, with 10 cents in silver or stamps, to

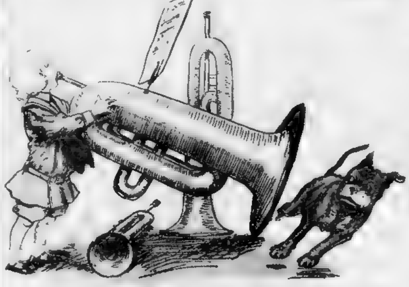
CHAPTER XXXIV

MA wanted me to take music lessons. She asked me how I thought I should like it. Of course I knew I should, because I am very fond of music; not ragtime or cheap, mushy, sentimental trash, but music—dainty songs by Chaminade or a waltz by Chopin.



I TRIED THE "SHADOW DANCE" FROM "DINORAH" ON THE HORN.

Well, ma wanted me to select an instrument, but I did not exactly know just what I was best suited for or what was best suited for me.

VOCAL MUSIC IS THE KIND HE IS SUITED TO

I went down town to a big music store and tried a few instruments. I knew I had a musical impulse, but I couldn't decide which instrument would be best adapted to my style of expression.

Tige wanted me to try a bass drum at first because he liked the looks of it, but when I tried the prize song from Meistersinger on it he changed his mind.

It didn't take long to convince me that I wasn't fitted for a bass horn player. I will never blow my own horn, and naturally refuse to blow any one else's for fear of injuring it. Besides, I don't like a wind instrument, for it takes too much wind.

NO ONE SEEMED TO WANT ME TO LEARN THE BASS DRUM

There were some beautiful looking instruments in the store, like harps. I think the harp is a beautiful and graceful instrument. I don't see how the angels all learn to play their harps. Pa says they all play harps up in heaven. He says the other place is where they are learning to play.

Well, of all the instruments I tried Tige liked the accordion best. He thinks he would like to learn to play it. Poor Tige! He has not got the right touch for instrumental music. Vocal music is the only kind he is suited to.

TIGE LIKED THE ACCORDION.

(To be continued next Sunday.)

THE HARP IS A GRACEFUL INSTRUMENT.

LIFE'S PROBLEM

Let Your Wife Advise You

Her Intuition May Mean YOUR SUCCESS

THIS is a big, heavy, confusing world. Many nations, many peoples, many languages, many hatreds and many hopes are hidden away in it.

But when you sift it down, when you look at it closely, whether your eye lights on Connecticut or the Congo, on China or California, on New York or the Netherlands, you see THE INDIVIDUAL FAMILY.

There sit the father, the mother and the children, many or few.

The real problem of this world is THE FAMILY PROBLEM.

The real SUCCESS of this world is the family success.

As men of the same nationality we struggle and fight and hope together here in America.

As members of the great human race we study, invent and plan together.

But the real work that counts, the real effort that pushes us upward, is the quiet, EARNEST, INTENSE, LOVING WORK IN THE HOME, far from the noise, far from the struggle.

That is where the real work of the world is done.

In that small domestic trinity of the home, mother, father and child, emblematic of the higher UNIVERSAL TRINITY, the great life of this earth is reflected.

What a drop of water is to the ocean the family is to the nation. The ocean is nothing but so many drops of water. The nation and the human race are nothing but so many individual families.

The great thing in the world, readers, is harmony, confidence between MAN AND WOMAN.

A man is happy and wise who seeks and encourages the advice of the woman who has joined her life to his.

That man is better than others, wiser than others, who realizes that in his wife Providence has given him a judgment that should help his, a strong spirit to lift him over the hard places, and an intuitive faculty for seeing the truth THAT NO MAN POSSESSES.

Men, remember that after all your most important work is DOING YOUR DUTY. And your most important DUTY is to take care of helpless children that you PUT INTO THIS WORLD, and to give to the next generation men and women capable of meeting its problems

Your children will be WHAT YOUR WIFE MAKES THEM.

Man is the active, powerful, aggressive, proud feature of THIS generation.

But woman is the queen, the creator of the NEXT generation

Every woman has in her heart an unselfish devotion of which the best man is incapable.

A man is unfortunate who fails to advise with his wife, to encourage her, to honor her AND TO CONSULT HER.

Even the red Indians whom we found here, and whom we dispossessed, had the brains, amid all their brutality, to consult with their women, who wanted neither glory nor reward, BUT SAFETY FOR THE TRIBE.

Saul consulted the wise—probably rather mannish—lady of Endor.

Macbeth talked to deceptive females with the queer broth and moustache. All this was foolish, superstitious recognition of the great fact that IN MATTERS OF INSTANTANEOUS JUDGMENT THE WOMAN IS FAR SUPERIOR TO THE MAN.

Beside you, at your table, patient and kind, economical, caring for the children, putting up with your ill-temper, managing as well as she can, you have an adviser far above any of these famous witches of old days. CONSULT HER.

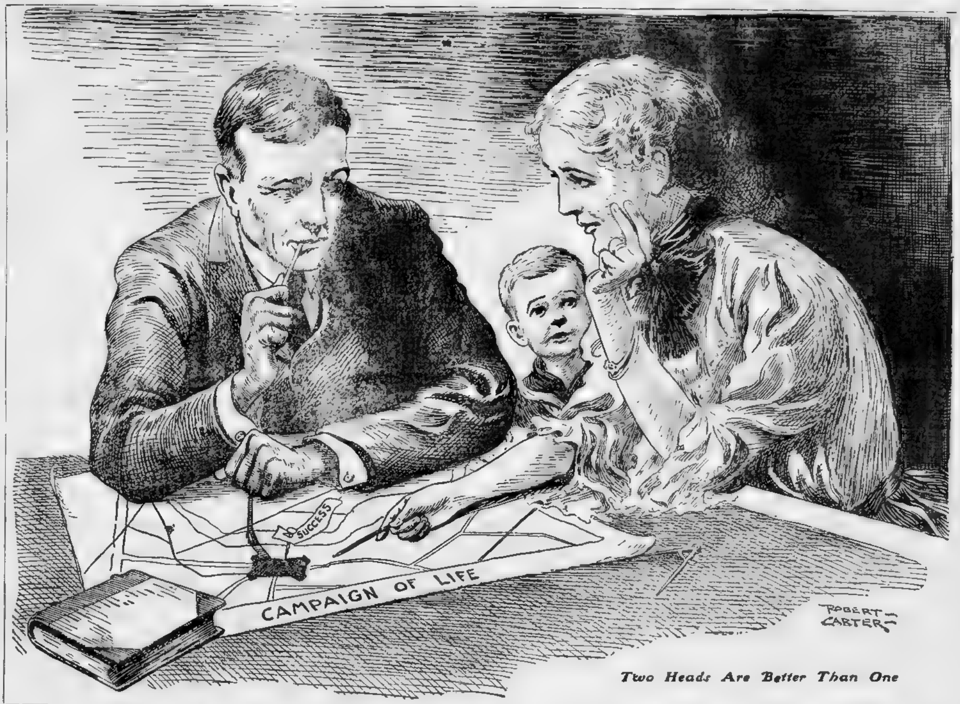
Every owner of a big factory will tell you that the great problem of success is to utilize the BY-PRODUCT.

Almost every great industry to-day puts in bank its millions made by utilizing the wealth OF THE BY-PRODUCT NEGLECTED UNTIL WITHIN A FEW YEARS.

Married men in their daily lives neglect a by-product of success excelling any chemical treasure from the copper mine or the oil refinery.

It is the innate, sound judgment of the wife and the mother, of the UNSELFISH WOMAN interested only in the welfare of her children and of their father.

Men, CONSULT YOUR WIVES, encourage them to think for you, show respect for their opinions. You will find in them a power of suggestion, criticism and judgment far above your own.



Two Heads Are Better Than One

HE WILL FIND HIS WAY

THE man in this picture, whom we call Uncle Sam, typifies all the men that have lived on this earth since the days when the brain of man began to govern in place of his stomach.

No man knows at what period in our history we human beings began to struggle for knowledge and justice in place of struggling for meat and blood.

But for long, long centuries, before this nation was born, before Europe became half-civilized, before Rome took culture and slaves from Greece, before Greece borrowed knowledge of Africa and Asia, BEFORE ASIA ROSE FROM THE BLACKNESS OF BRUTAL IGNORANCE, MAN, searching for ultimate truth and decent life on earth, had begun his journey through these dark caves.

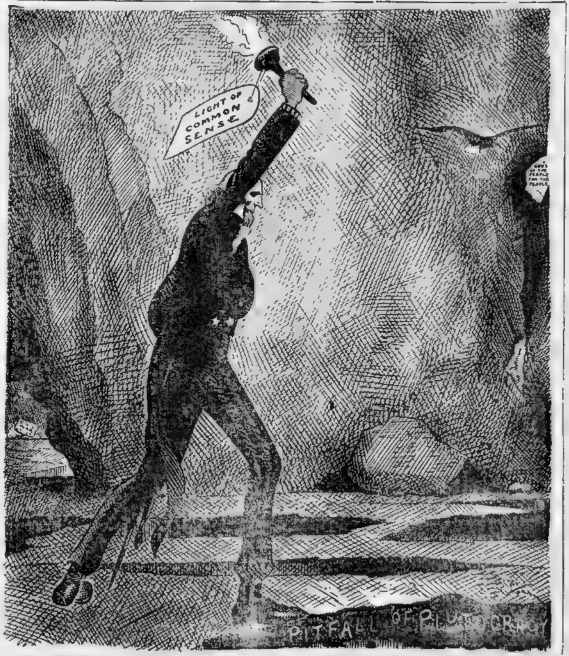
Every century has had its story of failure, of misery.

BUT EVERY CENTURY ALSO HAS HAD ITS STORY OF TRIUMPHANT SUCCESS.

By all kinds of dangerous chasms, through all kinds of vile passions, HUMANITY HAS PASSED SAFELY.

The history of our race has been a journey THROUGH A CHAMBER OF HORRORS.

In the name of the merciful God, human beings have burned and boiled, butchered, hanged and tortured each other.



Don't Worry About This Nation

In the name of divine right, kings and emperors have kept entire peoples starving.

In the name of the law, entire races have been deprived of every right, and in the name of justice, the man who told the truth has been burned alive, refusing to recant.

And STILL humanity has gone on. And ever the darkness has grown less.

Hidden away in man's mind, deep in his soul, there has been THE DETERMINATION TO FIND THE TRUTH.

And he WILL find it.

There will be more mistakes, more disappointments. Humanity will stumble, the great pendulum of destiny will swing one way and then the other. And we little creatures who watch it will believe that it is swinging forever in the same discouraging path.

But that is not true. The movement is constantly upward, IN A NEVER-ENDING SPIRAL OF HOPE.

Slowly we pass through the darkness, slowly TOWARD THE LIGHT.

Good men will keep fighting. And weak men will despair. VICTORY WILL BE WON AT LAST.

Let us hope that this people of ours, only one of many upon this earth, will do ITS SHARE, deserve its part in the final vindication and regeneration of the humanity to which Divine Wisdom has confided the care of this beautiful globe.

THE SPIRIT of PARIS. BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1906, by American Journal Examiner.

JUST as in Holland sentiment, coquetry, romance and passion, between men and women, is utterly concealed from the casual observer, so in France it is everywhere visible.

It is in the air and the eyes of the people, and in their conduct.

They make no effort at concealment.

In broad daylight, along public thoroughfares of Paris, quiet and orderly looking young men walk with an arm about the waists of neat and otherwise modest appearing young women.

They are busy conversing, and utterly oblivious to their surroundings; and no one looks curiously at them, save strangers in the town. It is an everyday sight to the residents of Paris.

Of course, we know these are not the young men and women of the cultured classes.

But there is no indication that they belong to the "drunk and disorderly" classes. Whatever irregularity there may be in their lives, it does not lead them into the courts. No drunkenness is seen in the streets of Paris.

I saw a pretty serving maid, in cap and apron, walking along a crowded street in a handsome residence portion of Paris on Sunday, with her lover's arm about her waist, and both her hands held in one of his. He was talking with great animation, and she was laughing as she listened. Her face was as innocent as that of a child, and his was fresh and young and happy. No one gave them a second glance.

Were such a thing to happen in New York City a crowd of "hoodlums" would surround the couple, and they would eventually be marched off to the station house.

Among the cultured classes, of whatever grade of morality (or immorality) the same sentiment is expressed in a more subtle and less obvious yet as unmistakable manner.

A woman of any attractions is never a mere individual to a Frenchman, as she seems to be in some other countries to the man, unless he is particularly interested.

She is always a possible romance.

It is this indescribable something, which we call "temperament," which gives Paris its peculiar atmosphere. Aside from its centuries of dramatic history, aside from its great architectural and art beauty, Paris breathes romance and sentiment from every pore.

There is a phase of Paris, however, which is difficult to understand. That is the vulgarity and indecency in the illustrations and the reading matter of scores of its publications, sold at every newsstand on every street corner.

Pictures utterly devoid of beauty or worth, in drawing or coloring, coarse and often nauseating in meaning, adorn the front pages of periodicals, whose written material is of the same order, and these papers or magazines, or brochures, by the dozen, are everywhere sold along with the best French art and literary periodicals and the daily newspapers.

It is no wonder young French girls are not allowed to walk on the street unchaperoned and that their literature is selected for them. Even young boys, I am told, are similarly guarded until the formative period is passed.

I have never been able to understand the modesty which is shocked by an exquisite painting or piece of statuary representing the human form. But because Paris is opulent in galleries filled with matchless works of art and its public buildings and its arches and bridges are weighted down with priceless groups of statuary, I am the more surprised that it permits and patronizes these cheap and vulgar revues and journals.

It would keep an army of Anthony Comstocks busy to intercept the sale of these publications, which are rather indecent than immoral. For they are so bad they turn the mind strongly toward morality and cleanliness.

A French editor of an important psychic magazine conceded my view of the matter to be correct. "But our government makes no objection," he said, "and so it goes on. I suppose it could not be allowed in America."

Then I told him some things about our "land of the free and home of the brave."

I told him of the excitement the "Bacchante" made and how Biondi's great group of the "Saturnalia" was condemned as immoral.

Then the Frenchman threw up his hands and cried: "I prefer the sins of my own country against art to yours."

Still another Frenchman assured me that American ideas of modesty were the cause of much ridicule here.

"American men and Englishmen are the most immoral of all our tourists when here," he said. "Yet they cry out against our literature and art.

"It is because we have everything open and visible that we are not afraid to compare our behavior with that of more modest countries."

In the meantime it seems a pity that America, being a young country, cannot strike the happy medium and encourage true art and true literature, while it excludes the work of degenerates and refuses to allow fanatics and cranks to control the art world. That is the condition to be desired.

And what a pity that beautiful Paris cannot do away with its disgusting phases of literature and art and meet us at a point where we would feel encouraged and safe to follow.

At present both countries are pursuing wrong methods to help humanity to its best development.

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

LITTLE noticed by the general public, some startling and revolutionary theories of the constitution and the future of this world of ours have lately been developed by scientists working upon that still most mysterious substance, radium. Mr. R. J. Strutt, a leader in these investigations in England, whose opinion carries much weight, is inclined from his experiments to the belief that the internal heat of the earth may be due to radium contained in the rocks forming the crust of the planet.

It is well known that radium in its process of disintegration is ceaselessly giving off heat. If radium is distributed widely and deeply in the crust of the earth, as all observations indicate, then there must be an accumulation of heat in the interior of the globe from this source. Major Dutton thinks that volcanic phenomena are probably due to such heat accumulation periodically melting the rocks beneath volcanic districts.

But Mr. Strutt's investigation shows that while radium is contained in all that portion of the earth's crust lying within our reach, it cannot be universally distributed throughout the whole mass of the globe, for if it were the heat of the earth would be very much greater than we actually find it; possibly even the surface of the earth would be too hot for the presence of living things.

Taking the observed increase of heat as we go down in the earth as a basis, he calculates that the radium contained in the globe must be confined to the upper forty or fifty miles of the crust, and that the vast interior portion must be composed of substances very different from those with which we are familiar on the surface, and containing little or no radium. If all this vast interior portion were once rich in radium it has now become exhausted, leaving only the remnant contained in the rocks down to a very moderate depth.

Mr. O. Fisher, the distinguished geologist, has lately shown that, upon the hypothesis that radium is the source of the earth's internal heat, the globe is not cooling off in the interior, as geologists have hitherto always assumed, and thus a fundamental belief of science is completely overset. The explanation generally offered of volcanic and earthquake phenomena has hitherto been that they result from the internal cooling and consequent gradual shrinking of the crust.

As the crust shrinks, according to this hypothesis, it breaks [illegible] explosion and occas[illegible] gr[illegible] shocks are the result. But in the [illegible] of Mr. Strutt and Mr. Fisher [illegible] this must be abandoned and we [illegible] some other explanation of such disasters. Major Dutton's theory of the agency of radium in accumulating heat at certain points where [illegible] would account for the volcanoes [illegible] the earthquakes which [illegible] Jamaica and Chili occur far from active volcanoes.

The very interesting question "What will be the consequence when the radium in the earth's crust is exhausted?" remains to be answered. It is suggested that the moon gives us a graphic reply to this question. Everybody who has looked at the moon with a telescope knows how [illegible] its surface is scarred with the marks of volcanic action. But there are no active volcanoes on the moon now. All are evidently dead and the little planet itself is dead.

Yet there must have been a time when the interior of the moon was hot, and the source of that heat, as in the case of the earth, was most probably radium. Then the moon became frozen, its water and its atmosphere were absorbed and all life disappeared from its surface.

Although in the case of the earth, Mr. Fisher thinks, a state of "thermal equilibrium" has been reached, when the earth neither gains nor loses heat, yet it cannot be assumed that this is a permanent state. It is the nature of radium to continue to disintegrate until its energy is all gone. The time must come, then, when all the radium in the earth will, so to speak, be dead. When that time arrives volcanoes and earthquakes will no longer trouble our planet. That may seem, at first glance, a very desirable thing.

Unfortunately, however, the life-bearing capacity of the earth depends upon the continuance of such disturbances, which constitute a kind of natural cultivation of the soil, continually supplying it with fresh mineral and gaseous constituents from the inner stores, and thus maintaining its fertility. When that activity ceases it is likely that all other activity will cease with it, and the face of the earth will become like that of its child, the moon—a universal desert.

Thus radium appears as the real basis of terrestrial life, and with its death the earth, too, will die.

Mirandy on the Voice That Is Stilled---By Dorothy Dix

"LAND SAKES," exclaimed Mirandy. "I don't know what we all is a-comin' to, but hit looks lak to me dat ef folks don't stop inventin' things dere won't be no peace an' res' in dis world nor de next.

"Now, dere's dat talkin' machine what dey calls de funnygraph, an' what looks lak a cross betwixt a tin horn an' a work box. Hit was skeery enough, de Lawd knows, to see hit give a kind of hump to hitself, an' den bus' out singin', or a-preachin', or spoutin' tin pan music dat put yo' teeth on aidge, but ef anybody saw fitten to afflict deirselfs wid one of 'em, hit warn't nobody else's business, an' you could kinder pass 'em by lak you does dem what performs on de planola.

"Dey brought deir troubles down on deir own haids, an' whilst you might cas' round in yo' mind a-wonderin' how long hit would be befo' one of dem funnygraphs would lan' em in de crazy house, still you didn't have no cause to pity 'em.

"But dat was becaze you hadn't prognosticated de true inwardnes of dat contraptshun, for hit ain't nothin' mo' nor less dan a hant.

"Yassum, hits de conjur, an' no mistake, an' dere ain't no way to git away from hit alive or dead. I always was suspicious of hit, an' now I knows, an' ef Ike was to bring one of dem things home wid him hit would be me for de tall timber. Yassum, you would see one fat ole nigger woman breakin' de record at skedaddlin'.

"What makes me say what I does is dis: las' night Ma'y Jane was a-readin' in de paper to me 'bout dat woman out in Colorado what's puttin' in de time whilst she's dyin' a slow an' lingerin' death by talkin' in a funnygraph, so dat when she's dead a[illegible] all her husband is got to do is des [illegible] on de machine, an' shet his eyes, an' she'll be a-handin' him back talk out [illegible] grave, so to speak.

"'My Gord,' says I when I hears [illegible] po' man sho' has got my sympathy. [illegible] his sufferin's gwine to be is someth[illegible] I trembles to think 'bout, as he [illegible] a evenin' wid de goose flesh comin' out on de back of his neck, an' his ha'r a-risin' on his scalp as he listens to de voice of his departed Mariar a-tryin' to boss him from de cemetery!'

"Yit he won't da'r not to turn on de machine, for he can't look dat funnygraph in de eye a-knowin' dat hit is loaded to de [illegible] wid las' words dat hit is bustin' to turn loose."

'Dat's so,' 'spons Ike, 'hit looks lak de[illegible] was tryin' to take away all de comfort from de mourners.'

"'I calls hit sweet,' says Ma'y J[illegible] is a gal an' is got romantic notions, '[illegible] of de rapture of hearin' once mo' de voice dat is stilled!'

"'Humph,' 'sclaims Ike, wid a [illegible] glance at me. 'I ain't never yit see[illegible]ried man dat felt any call to [illegible]versation of his wife. Mos' of [illegible] dey wants of hit as dey goes along [illegible] funeral dere's a sort of a p[illegible] steals over 'em as dey recommence[illegible] voice dat has done wo' itself to a frazzle [illegible] of deir faults is hushed forever.

"'I hates to criticise a lady, but ef you axes my opinion of dat Colorado woman, I'se bound to say dat she's takin' a mighty onfair advantage of her husband.'

'Maybe,' says I, 'he's sech a po' ornery, shiftless sort of a creeter dat she couldn't git through specifyin' her opinion of him in one life time.

"'Or maybe he's lak some folks dat I could name ef I wanted to, dat would drap all of his money in crap games, an' go traipsin off atter yaller gals with straight front figgers [illegible] marshall waves, cepin' dat hit gives him shivers to think what his wife is gwine to [illegible] ef she ketches him.

'For what does de Good Book say on dis p'int? "De fear of his wife is de beginnin' [illegible]rtue wid a man."'

'I ain't a 'sputin' hit,' says Ike, 'but, all de same, I sticks to hit dat a woman says all [illegible] entitled to say whilst she's alive, an' dat when she is dead an' gone her husband is entitled to some peace an' res'. I know dat when I'se a widower, an' begins to sorter feel my freedom, dat ef any funnygraph gits to monkeyin' wid me in de ole familiar tones dat rips a man up de back lak a buz saw when he comes home 'bout three o'clock in de mawnin', dat I lay dat I'll fetch hit one swipe wid de ax, an' smash hit into smithereens.

"'Cose I specks dat jest at fust dat de funnygraph mought be a comfort to de be[illegible]d widower, caze de house would seem [illegible] of quiet an' lonesome widout nobody to quarrel wid, an' to ax him whar he stopped on his way home, an' what he did wid dat [illegible] hits she let him have out of his pay envelope, an' to remind him dat everything dat he laks to eat is bad for his stummick, an' [illegible] he can't fool her by chewin' cloves, caze [illegible] knows de smell of beer when she sniffs [illegible]

'But after he gits over de habit of pullin' off his shoes at de front do' an' sneakin' in of a night, hit would be mighty wearin' jest as he settled hisself in de parlor wid his pipe, an' a glass, an' a few friends to enjoy a little game, to hear de funnygraph start up wid de remarks dat de dear departed was accustomed to makin' 'bout dem what flung away deir money in games of chance, an' got too familious wid de demon rum, an' 'sociated wid dem low down folks lak de company what was present.

"'No, Mirandy,' says Ike, 'don't you put yo'self to no trouble to go talkin' no las' words in a funnygraph for me, becaze in case de Lawd should see proper to remove you fust I'll try to wrastle along on what I kin remember of de things dat you is already done said to me whilst you was alive, an' yo' tongue was in good workin' order. You ain't got a thing to reproach yo'self wid on dat score, for ef dere is anything dat ought to been said 'bout my faults an' weaknesses dat you ain't said, I disremembers what hit could be.

"'Furdermo',' says he, 'dat funnygraph business whar de dead keeps on a-talkin' to you is a flyin' in de face of Providence. When de Lawd stills a voice, he wants hit to stay still, becuze de one dat's had to endure hit has got enough of it.'

"'Amen,' 'spons I, 'an dat's de reason dat I'se tryin' to say everything I got to say to you whilst I'se here, an' you dasn't shut me up.'"

THE FOUR MORTONS AT THE ORPHEUM

First Productions of Two New Plays Here

BOSTON [illegible] are to be honored this week by being permitted to witness [illegible] of [illegible] plays. The event is theatrically important, too, [illegible] of David Belasco to try out his annual [illegible] of at W[illegible]. His "The Rose of the Rancho," with [illegible] Frances Starr, whom everyone here knows for her wonderful work in the Castle Square Company a few years ago, has its first performance at the Majestic Theatre on Tuesday night; the theatre on Monday being given over to a dress rehearsal. On Monday afternoon at the Park Theatre the first [illegible] performance of C. Haddon Chambers's new play, "Sir Anthony," is to be given. Those who saw it in rehearsal declare that it is a wonderfully strong production.

At the Colonial Theatre E. S. Willard remains for a week of repertoire. Maude Adams begins her [illegible] week in "Peter Pan" at the Hollis and "Mamselle Sallie," the best musical comedy that ever came down the Great White Way, continues for another week at the Boston. Francis Wilson, who has pushed "The Mountain Climber" to the top notch of success, has convinced his managers that another week should be added to his engagement, and he thus will remain here two weeks more. Little Cecil Spooner, who has fairly entranced New Yorkers in "The Girl Raffles," comes to the Globe, and "Wild Nell, a Child of the Regiment," comes to the Grand Opera House. That delight of the college boys, "The College Widow," George Ade's best comedy, returns to the Tremont for a brief engagement, with many of the original cast.

All the stock companies present new bills. The Bijou Company will revive the laughable farce, "The Man From Mexico," the Castle Square trying something new to it in "Monsieur Beaucaire," and the Bowdoin Square players "Hearts Adrift." All the vaudeville and burlesque houses change their bills. What is going on can be better judged by the following details:

Majestic Theatre

With its first performance scheduled for Tuesday night, the new Belasco play, "The Rose of the Rancho," written by Mr. Belasco and Richard Walton Tully, begins a two weeks' engagement at the Majestic Theatre. Tuesday night's presentation will mean not only the initial performance on any stage of this latest production of the sponsor of "The Music Master" and "The Girl of the Golden West," [illegible] "The Da[illegible] of the Gods" [illegible] other triumphs, [illegible] especially significant [illegible] this chief among producers has ever made in this city. "The Rose of the Rancho" deals with the American invasion of Spanish California in the late fifties. The place, the period and the people teem with color and action. The authors have written a stirring story based on the conflict of the Anglo-Saxon and Latin races represented by the American [illegible] lustful for territory and using divers means to obtain it, and the descendants of the old Spanish grandees, proud and fiery, but guiding actions by their oft-repeated motto, "Manana." So far as the production is concerned, it will undoubtedly equal anything credited to Mr. Belasco in the past, while the quality of the cast may be easily judged by a glance at this [illegible] roster: Hamilton Revelle, [illegible], Miss Frances Starr, Miss Grace Gaylor Clark, Miss Maria Davis, [illegible] W. Cope, J. Harry Benrimo, Miss [illegible], Miss Maria Mclean, [illegible] and Frank H. Westerton. Matinees will be given on Saturdays only.

"Sir Anthony" at the Park

At the Park Theatre to-morrow afternoon C. Haddon Chambers' new play, "Sir Anthony," is to be given its initial performance [illegible] series of daily special matinees. "Sir Anthony" is a comedy dealing with the middle class life of England, [illegible] no moral lesson, has no [illegible] concealed about it, there is nothing heavy, tragic or intense [illegible]. It is [illegible] comedy [illegible] writing [illegible] with [illegible] which in William [illegible] Clarges, [illegible] Helen Lowell, Maud Creighton, Olive Wyndham, Miss Cooper [illegible]. The production is from the [illegible] and is in [illegible]. Mr. Chambers is inclined [illegible] as the initial [illegible] with [illegible] always received [illegible]. He will be on hand for the opening performance to-morrow af[illegible]. [illegible] engagement will not interfere in any way with the regular performances at this theatre of Francis Wilson or of Lawrence D'Orsay. Matinees will be given Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of each week.

Tremont Theatre

At the Tremont Theatre on Monday night Henry W. Savage's smart production of George Ade's comedy masterpiece will begin a return engagement. The remarkable success of this comedy, with its realistic football scene, true color and atmosphere [illegible] is well known [illegible] "The College Widow" [illegible] Ade's idea of [illegible]. It is [illegible] that Miss Vaughan was a real college widow only a few years ago. She is a graduate of the University of Kansas [illegible] of the Kappa Kappa Gamma and other college frats. Thomas Meighan, the handsome Billy Bolton, [illegible] comedian who sacrifices beauty for art, will repeat her performance of Flora Wiggins. Frederick Burton, the original "Bub Hicks," is another favorite. Adeline Dunlap will appear as Bessie Tanner. Handsome Louis Ford is another favorite in the role of the much-[illegible] and decidedly [illegible] chaperone. E. J. Buckus, Thomas Delmar, Dan Collyer, Laurence Wheat, Albert Tavernier, Edgar Halstead, Hal Harcross are all in the cast.

Colonial Theatre

E. S. Willard has only one week left of his engagement at the Colonial Theatre. Probably no question has been asked more times than "When will he play 'The Man Who Was?'" It will be given [illegible] twice during the week, each time preceded by "David Garrick," on Monday evening and at Saturday [illegible] Mr. Willard [illegible] through [illegible] the military camp where he spent his manhood and where the awakening of a former life makes one of the most vivid [illegible] that Boston [illegible] ever seen. The week's programme [illegible] "The Professor's Love Story," [illegible] evening and Wednesday afternoon, [illegible] Wednesday evening, "The Middleman," Thursday evening, "A Pair of Spectacles," Friday evening, and [illegible] Saturday evening. At these [illegible] with the full strength of Mr. Willard's company.

Castle Square Theatre

The [illegible] of "Monsieur Beaucaire," as Booth Tarkington [illegible] with [illegible] the play [illegible] when produced by Richard Mansfield a few seasons [illegible] this week. [illegible] is played by [illegible] the role will be [illegible] by [illegible] Miss Lawton [illegible] of Winterset, John Waldron, Beau Nash by [illegible], Mr. Molyneux by Mr. [illegible], and Miss Lasche, Miss Brandt, Mr. [illegible], Mr. Kent, Mr. Hull, Mr. Albion and Mr. Murray will be in other important roles.

Bijou Theatre

Again John Craig and his company will be seen in a jolly farce, for the attraction at the Bijou Theatre this week will be du Souchet's "The Man from Mexico," which in many [illegible] is much funnier [illegible] and is sentenced to [illegible] days in the penitentiary. How to explain to his wife [illegible] problem. It is [illegible] that he has [illegible] a trip to Mexico [illegible] in the third [illegible] who has been [illegible]. [illegible] Mr. Craig [illegible] and Miss Young [illegible] Rosa [illegible] Jocelyn [illegible] Colcord and [illegible] in amusing roles.

Keith's Theatre

By Clement L. Pollock.

WHAT a difference there is in actors! In running over the list, how many can one count who, in every bit of his work, in every play in which he appears, in every feature of scenic appointment and in the actors who support him, gives out his very best to his audiences every night. Most of them "act" only on first nights. But E. S. Willard is an exception. I saw him last week at the Colonial in "Colonel Newcome." He has never done a more sincere or more conscientious piece of work. To the tiniest bit of detail in make-up, in gesture or in "business" he was the embodiment of the character which Thackeray created. He is always so, in whatever character he assumes. See him in "The Man Who Was," then as "David Garrick," then as "The Middleman," and follow that with "The Professor" and "Tom Pinch," as I did last year, and you will agree that E. S. Willard is the most conscientious, most versatile and the most satisfying actor on the stage to-day. As Manager Lothian said of him this week, "He never four-flushes."

PEOPLE like to be mystified. The occult is really a lodestone. Maybe the Fays do not deal in the occult. But it serves the same purpose just the same. Here's a small instance: With a friend I went to the Orpheum and we both enjoyed the splendid vaudeville bill. The Fays came on. It was a simple act. A block of blank paper was passed through the audience and any one who desired might write a question. This happened: My friend—a man—wrote something on the pad. He was told to tear off the sheet and return it. He did so. Another act intervened and the young woman of the Fay combination appeared on the stage to answer the queries. She sat in a chair, she [illegible]. In a clear voice she called out the messages that had been written and their answers. Mind you, the written question was still in the possession of the writer and had not been sent to the lady mystic—that is, not so that you could notice it. The name of my friend was called. He answered. From the young woman under the cloak came the words, "You will get your vacation, but you will not get any pay." My friend looked grieved. I thought it was all a joke. Then he very solemnly drew from his pocket a slip of paper. I read it. He had asked whether he was going to get his vacation. The reply with the monetary reservation cast a gloom over him for the rest of the evening.

IN the make-up of "Mamselle Sallie," the new musical play at the Boston, you will find no cold-storage girls nor canned material. Instead, it shines with the freshness of Springtime, in which there is the beauty of the bursting bud, the sweetness of the singing bird, the sprightly festivity of happy youth. Ordinarily in these notes I do not mention the names of authors. Here's an exception. Robert B. Smith wrote the book and lyrics and Raymond Hubbell the music. Both [illegible] extra well. Mr. Smith apparently has not the acquaintance of our old friend Joe Miller, nor does his libretto consist of a collection of ancient [illegible]. I have not the space to repeat some of his sparkling dialogue. The [illegible] lines took on a higher tone than the usual careless, mechanical verse [illegible] fitted admirably the high-class melodious music provided by Mr. Hubbell, which suggests DeKoven and Victor Herbert. The solos and choruses rendered [illegible] seldom surpassed in much more pretentious productions.

Katie Barry, who [illegible] famous through her appearance in the "Chinese Honeymoon," was [illegible]. She was Mamselle Sallie. She sang, danced and acted with that [illegible] delightful drollery that characterized her of old. Her best piece of work [illegible] song, "And I Laughed." John Slavin is one of the most natural come[illegible] (apparently) that has appeared in Boston in years—and one of the best [illegible] made a distinct hit singing, "Hurroo, Hurray and Hurrah for [illegible]" [illegible] I want to ring in a word for W[illegible], Jr., and his [illegible] delectable baritone song "Her Portrait." It was a treat. One of [illegible] musical numbers is "Watch When You Walk Out." It is [illegible] George F. Mack an old Castle Square favorite, and the chorus. Mack [illegible] better than he can sing—but the chorus! It is a thing of beauty and a [illegible], and its loveliness increases the closer to it you get. The introduction [illegible] the chorus of the grand old national [illegible] Mr. Mack has sung a tuneful jingle that sets the whole audience whistling, called forth unbounded approval from the audience. A pessimist wouldn't dare look "Mamselle Sallie" in the face long—and still remain sour hearted.

Little Stories of Stage Favorites

"Honey Boy" George Evans, who duplicated at Keith's Theatre the phenomenal record he made recently at Philadelphia of giving an entirely different monologue for five weeks in succession, is the publisher of [illegible] paper. It is called George Evans's [illegible], and its motto is "[illegible]." The Honey Boy says in this little sheet: "[illegible] say 'A knock is as good as a boost any day.' If you think so, I'll give you a chance to get rich. I'll trade you four great big knocks for one fair-sized boost any day."

"The House of Mirth," Clyde Fitch's dramatization of Mrs. Wharton's novel of the same name, has proven a miserable failure in New York, and has been withdrawn from the boards. The Telegraph prints the following amusing anecdote concerning it: A woman writer called upon the mother of Clyde Fitch, who is a most estimable lady, but [illegible] deaf.

"What is your son going to do with 'The House of Mirth'?" asked the scribbler.

Mrs. Fitch caught the word "house," but lost the remainder of the question.

"Oh, he's going to have the roof fixed," she replied. "[illegible] you know. I didn't know that you knew anything about it."

Marjorie Nevins, one of the principals in "The Blue Moon," has, like Mark Twain, to deny that she is dead. Her family has been flooded with telegrams since a dispatch announcing her demise was printed in some of the Boston papers. Miss Nevins says she feels very badly over the affair, and, as "The Blue Moon" is coming to Boston soon, she wishes to be thought alive still.

Annie Russell's "Puck" in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," has received the indorsement of the Department of Education of New York city. Principal M[illegible] of the Girls' Technical High School writes to her: "I feel that you have done a great public service, Miss Russell, in [illegible] such a piece of art as this beautiful [illegible] a fetching characterization [illegible]."

Charlie Barton of Rice [illegible] were playing in Boston at [illegible] last week, tells the [illegible] girl who could not act as [illegible] worried and nervous because [illegible] possibly [illegible] at sea. After [illegible] he said to her: "Act as you [illegible] Easter bonnet was not going [illegible] to you in time to wear to church." Her [illegible] was the finest bit in the play [illegible]

John Craig owns a fine auto[illegible] he doesn't keep it in a garage [illegible] a week [illegible] that during his absence [illegible] car had been rented every day [illegible] One day he went to get it [illegible] to drive to his home in [illegible] found the front of it smashed [illegible] twisted and the engine [illegible] man who rented it had been in a collision. It cost several hundred [illegible] the damage, but Mr. Craig didn't pay [illegible]

Richard Dorney, widely known in theatrical life and now [illegible] of "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway," has lately been receiving, together with Mrs. Dorney, hearty congratulations from friends in and out of the profession. The occasion: Arrival this week at their home at [illegible] Heights, N. Y., of a little man whom they now speak of as "the [illegible]" until he is christened formally. Mrs. Dorney was Miss Rita M[illegible] of Dorchester, Mass. Her marriage to Mr. Dorney took place on December 7 last. Mr. Dorney long was the right hand man and trusted friend of the late Augustin Daly.

To keep herself fresh in her part Miss Adams changes [illegible] performance in some small detail at every playing of "Peter Pan." Many new touches have been added to Barrie's play by this ingenious little interpreter since the opening night in New York. But the most novel addition [illegible] sewing machine [illegible] pirate ship scene with a pirate mending a sail [illegible] has been introduced during the [illegible] Street Theatre performance is Mr. B[illegible] own invention.

Francis Wilson had troubles of his own [illegible] week, for a [illegible] was arrested in New York charged with swindling [illegible] a substantial sum by means of a [illegible] painting, but still he kept up his fund of merriment in "The Mountain Climber."

The Castle Square play voting contest is at an end, and "Sag Harbor" is the drama [illegible] by a majority of the patrons [illegible] during the first week in December. It will be given an especially fine presentation and will recall memories of the late James A. Herne.

The play to be given by John Craig's company at the Bijou Theatre for the week beginning November 19 will be "Young Mrs. Winthrop," which has not been seen in Boston for a number of years. It is a four act comedy of New York life by Bronson Howard.

All the nice names sent in by the Bowdoin Square Theatre patrons for Miss [illegible] Champagne's dramatic creation known so far as "the play without a name," are being examined by the judges. Hundreds upon hundreds of good names were sent in and the judges will award the gold prizes next Thursday.

This is the third year that Gertrude Q[illegible] has appeared as Flora Wiggins in "The College Widow," which comes to the Tremont Theatre to-morrow evening. Miss [illegible] splendid performance was one of the chief hits in the original production at the Garden Theatre, New York.

Among the novelties at Keith's soon will be Lee Tung Foo, the only Chinese vocalist in vaudeville. He has made quite a sensation in the West.

Two old-world importations just booked for early appearance at Austin & Stone's are a quartet of trained Nubian lions and a Parisian illusion show, said to be the greatest on the stage to-day.

"AND I LAUGHED UNTIL I THOUGHT I'D CHOKE"

Katie Barry and Johnny Slavin The Fun Makers

By Eleanor Ames.

MUSICAL comedy can never be sincerely and justly described as high art, but until something adequately useful can be discovered or invented, we cannot afford to treat it unkindly

As a matter of fact, it furnishes the means for the real missionary work of the stage to-day—the mission labor of relaxation.

In broad theatrical parlance, a missionary may be described as that individual who with wholesome nonsense and cheerful wit causes the world-wearied public to relax, rest, forget, and, above all, to laugh

The thought was driven home forcefully in the Boston Theatre on the opening night of the latest musical melange, "Mlle Sallie."

The house was filled. It was not a fashionable audience, nor one which would be described in society journals as "cultured." It was just an independent crowd, made up of that great human stratum, which "does and dares," and which for want of a better name is known as the middle class. Solid, substantial, hard headed business men, men of family, men whose faces showed the strain of business battle, were plentifully sprinkled through the house.

It was a time when the entire city was nervously tense, the eve of an important political election.

City Under Strain on Eve of Big Election

And under such conditions two small but powerful missionaries, John Slavin and Katie Barry, radiated cheerfulness and good humor so generously that they pierced the outer shell of worry and care, reached the risibles, loosened laughter and brought us all out of ourselves

"And we laughed."

"And never smile real wide,
But I am pleased to say I always look
Upon the funny side
One night I went to see a comic play
That the people couldn't seem to see
The ice trust reigned till some one looked my way
And made a face at me.
And I laughed until I thought I'd choke.
Thank goodness, none can say I don't appreciate a joke.
I caused the little Major such delight night?
He said, 'Can't you come around to-morrow
And I laughed. I laughed. Oh, I laughed.'

In her dressing room, crawling out of that indescribable buccaneer's garb, which she wears when "Greek meets Greek," Miss Barry said.

Enjoys Laughing and Making Others Laugh

"If there is any one thing in the world I'd rather do than laugh myself it is to make other people laugh. It makes me my money," she added roguishly, hopping up on a chair to reach her shirt waist, which hung on a hook.

"Once I was serious," began John Slavin, as he came out of his dressing room, carefully polishing that wonderful tile hat for his elopement scene.

"But it preyed on my mind to such an extent I had to quit it. It was in 'Temperance Town.' I played Bingo Jones and I had to reproach father for being so bibulous

"'Father,' I said, 'this is the last penny you shall ever spend here.'

"Now that was a pathetic speech, wasn't it?

"Heart-broken son, striving to help him to overcome his awful craving for liquor!

"Finally son gets independent and tragic.

"'Father, this is the last penny you shall ever spend here,' 'here' meaning the saloon.

"Taking the money away so father could never have another drink.

"Nothing but pathos in the situation, but it wasn't the pathos that preyed on my mind. It was the fact that I couldn't stop laughing whenever I started to say those awful words. So I had to give it up."

Mr. Slavin confesses to being able to walk upright under a stick held five feet and one-sixteenth of an inch above the floor.

Katie Barry would have five inches of space between her head and that same stick. As a pair of comedians they make a combination hard to beat

Miss Barry thinks Mr. Slavin is "terribly funny," and Mr. Slavin says that "Miss Barry is the most charming and sensible actress he was ever associated with."

Miss Barry a London Girl; Here Four Years

Katie Barry came to America four years ago, having been brought over from her native London to fill a six-weeks' engagement with "The Chinese Honeymoon".

She is still here, and the chances are so much in favor of her remaining here that she is beginning to think about fulfilling the ambition of her life and having a home.

Katie Barry wants a home with a longing that amounts to a passion.

"I've started homes before," she said sadly, "but I've had to give them up because I was too busy to attend to them. Now I believe that I'm going to be able to buy a little place somewhere and have a permanent home. I like America's climate. I must have sunshine and I can't get it in London

"I want a hearthstone of my own and some animals, cats and dogs

"It's an awful thing for a domestic woman not to have a place of her own."

Please don't laugh because Katie Barry styles herself "a domestic woman."

It isn't funny. It's pathetically true

If you gave Katie Barry a fortune to-morrow, the very first thing she would do would be to begin a tour of the real estate offices in quest of a home.

And having found the home, she would surround herself with animals, books, music, and a very few, very choice, tried and trusted friends and settle down in blissful content.

People frighten Miss Barry almost to death. She would rather play Juliet in an all-star cast with an audience composed of other aspiring Juliets than to face a lot of people at a social crush.

Her chosen friends are not many, but they are true.

The stage is her life. She was picked out of her cradle when she was in long clothes and taken on as a babe in arms by her uncle, George Conquest.

When she was five years old she played her first part, that of a small boy in a play called "Queen's Evidence."

Starving, ragged little boys have been favorite roles with Katie Barry, who does serious work with a cleverness that equals her fun-making art. And she has had prominent parts in Shakespearean productions for years in England. Romance has tinged this bright little woman's life rose-hued, but she has never succumbed to the matrimonial microbe.

"Matrimony and our business don't come together at all," she declares. "I believe in marriage, and I think the woman who is happily married to the man of her choice is the wisest and happiest woman in the world, but a woman can't divide her affections between a husband and a career without one or the other suffering. You can't have both a career and a husband.

"If a woman wants to work, she mustn't marry.

Ready to Give Up Her Career for Marriage

"And when you marry you'll give up your business?" I asked

"Gladly and without hesitation," she responded.

John Slavin does not share Miss Barry's views on matrimony. He has a charming wife, who was formerly Miss Pelham of Boston, and has had more or less stage success

And Mr. and Mrs. Slavin have a home, a handsome estate at Elmhurst, and a small son and heir that is a wonder.

The junior Slavin is almost as big as his father. And as a dancer, "he has me beat," declares the fond papa.

"And will he follow your footsteps and the footlights?" I asked.

"If he wants to," said "Papa" Slavin, earnestly. "If he feels as he does now that he wants to be an actor, he's going to be one. That's what I tell his mother. 'Let him be what he wants to be and thinks he ought to be.'

"If he is any good on the stage, he'll be sure of a good living, and that might be more than he'd get if we tried to make a lawyer or a doctor or a frenzied financier of him."

If John Slavin hadn't broken both his wrists in a fall from his mount on the race track, the chances are that he would never have had his name on a theatre program.

Slavin Started Out in Life as a Jockey

He started out in life as a jockey on the Guttenberg race track, and in the days when Tod Sloan was an apprentice, Johnny Slavin was sending winners under the wire in famous style.

Then one day when he was riding a particularly fractious mount a program fluttered before the horse's eyes, he shied, jumped and when they picked up his rider the wrists that had held the reins over many a thoroughbred were useless.

In San Francisco John Slavin had a chance to begin a stage career. The rest we all know. It was not a case of a good jockey being spoiled, but the evolution of a good actor from a good jockey.

When Mme. Schuman Heink gained fame in "Love's Lottery," John Slavin's songs and jokes and fun making divided honors with the vocal triumph of the star

With Lillian Russell's wondrous blonde beauty and gorgeous gowns and jewels for a background he has radiated good cheer.

Successful Without Relying on Authors

He does not rely on others to make the part for him. He takes the foundation others have given him and fits it to himself and adds all the trimming.

In his own words, "the best thing that can happen to a show after it opens with good people is to fire the authors"

It's not easy to analyze the Slavin method of getting the laughs.

It is not a roustabout, knock-you-down-and-take-it-away-from-you method. The minute John Slavin comes in sight, the laughter begins in the house.

People are on the watch for fun, with mouths stretched and hands upraised ready to applaud. It may be a grimace, it may be only a turn of the eye, or a shift of the feet, but it gets the house.

Slavin himself says, "There's no rule for being funny. If you are funny, you are, and if you are not, you are NOT, and that's all there is to it.

"There is nothing so sad as the man who would be funny and isn't, just as there is nothing so funny as the man who would be serious and can't.

"Humor is something within one's self, like genius.

"You can't buy a sense of humor. You can't beg, borrow nor steal it.

"You've got to have it, and if you haven't it naturally the spurious article can always be detected"

"Old Jokes Good, but Give 'Em New Clothes"

"The same fashion there is in getting out a daily paper. Keep up to date—and a little bit ahead of the date.

"The old jokes are all right if you put enough new clothes on 'em so people can't catch their real antiquity.

"Action, quick action, and lots of it. That's what people want nowadays.

"They want to be amused quick and plenty. They come to the theatre to forget their troubles and let the smiles chase the frowns away.

"Lots of color, catchy music, tunes you can 'whistle when you go out,' as Mr. Mack sings, pretty girls, pretty pictures, good fun—that's what people want in a musical show, and that's what they're going to have."

"And musical comedy will not die as long as such demand is in the public?" I asked.

"Sure not," he replied.

"What's to take its place? You wouldn't give the public a lemon when it wants a peach, would you?"

"Why have men more keen sense of humor than women?" I asked.

"Why is Billy Carlton tall and I short?" he retorted. "Ask me something easy."

Don't Pay Your Doctor To Keep You Sick

The first impulse of persons who find that they are ailing in any way is to plunge into a drug store and purchase a box of pills or a bottle of some patent medicine.

Failing to get more than temporary relief from this they then consult the doctor, and he writes a prescription which more than likely calls for the same drug in a different form from what the patient has already taken. The same result, generally. Next the patient comes to the conclusion that this doctor didn't diagnose the case right, and then goes to another with the same result. And so on.

From S. F. Examiner, Aug. 21, '06.

Our modern medical system is a foolish system. We practically pay our doctors to keep us ill. Their prosperity depends not on our health, but on our sickness.

To-day very little is known of medicine and its use. The wisest doctor can do but little more than clear out the system or accelerate the action of the heart. When he has done both or all of these things he has reached the end. DOCTORS CAN'T CURE.

Now, just study yourself for a moment. The failure or breaking down of any organic function means that it has not strength to do its work. If there was any nourishment in drugs they might bring about a healthy change, but you know there is not. Drugs are drugs, stimulants, narcotics antidotes, POISONS, not food. Food is needed to build up new energy. Electricity is nerve food, nerve life. Electro-Vigor is the newest and most successful method of applying it.

No pain or debility can exist in a body charged with electric life; you can have no rheumatism, no weakness, no inactive parts, because the life generated by this grand force gives health and strength to every organ.

ELECTRO-VIGOR is a girdle of dry cell batteries which you wear [illegible] your waist while you sleep. It is charged ready for use, when you get it, and generates its own power constantly. There is no nasty vinegar or acid to bother with; no trouble—no odor.

Electro-Vigor is worn as comfortably as your clothing, adjusted in a minute and made as strong or mild as you like by the pressure of a finger upon the regulator.

With Electro-Vigor you can carry the current direct to the spot affected. You can get the full current at your ankles, feet, arms, shoulders, head or any other part of your body.

We have fixed a price for Electro-Vigor which puts it within the reach of everyone

REMARKABLE INCREASE IN VALUES OF LAND AROUND DEWEY SQUARE IN THE PAST TEN YEARS PROVES HOW RAPID TRANSIT HELPS REAL ESTATE

Assessors' Books Show Parcels Have Doubled in Value Since 1896.

A [illegible] could not be given of the [illegible] in the value of [illegible] extension and [illegible] of transit [illegible] by a [illegible] of the values of properties in the vicinity of Dewey square ten years [illegible] of stra[illegible] figures [illegible] be found [illegible] Boston Board of Assessors.

In line with the repeated [illegible] of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN [illegible] wage earners to invest their [illegible] real estate the safest [illegible] for a portion of their weekly earnings [illegible] of the prospective purchaser [illegible] locality [illegible] particularly with [illegible] improved in [illegible]

An appreciable [illegible] caused [illegible] of real estate in [illegible] suburbs [illegible] extension to Forest Hills [illegible] extension of the [illegible] Charles River dam to Lechmere [illegible] Cambridge.

The completion of the Washington street subway [illegible] subway projected to Harvard square [illegible] cutting down the schedule time from [illegible] square [illegible] various points will [illegible] an appreciable increase in the value of land in those localities.

Although the territory in and around Boston is at present well covered by electric lines, extensions of these lines will naturally [illegible] about in the less populated districts as the population grows [illegible] and increase in the mileage of the electric roads is thereby warranted. These are things to be [illegible] by the wage earner before he buys his piece of land, either for a home or for an investment.

Land Doubled in Value.

For his information, some figures are here presented, showing the great increase, within a decade, in the value of real estate in the vicinity of the South station, Dewey square.

Around Dewey square in these ten years land has doubled in value as the direct result of the construction of the new South terminal station. In some cases it has more than doubled. One parcel of land facing Dewey square, containing 9,331 square feet, on which is located the building occupied in part by a large retail grocery house, has increased in value until to-day it is assessed at exactly 170 per cent. [illegible] that it was assessed for in 1896. This land in 1896 was valued at $110,800. To-day it is valued at $298,600. And [illegible] these figures refer [illegible] the [illegible]

How Transit Facilities Increase Value of Land

Here is a convincing illustration of how improvement in transit facilities causes the value of land to increase. These six parcels are [illegible] in the vicinity of Dewey Square. Their value on the books of the Board of Assessors is shown in 1896 before the South Terminal Station was erected, and their value to-day, when they are deriving benefit from this great improvement. These figures refer [illegible] to the bare land.

Indicated on Map.	No. of Sq. Ft.	Value 1896.	Value 1906.
Plot 2	1,230	30,800	67,600
Plot 3	10,094	150,000	302,800
Plot 4	9,331	110,800	298,600
Plot 5	17,139	188,500	377,000
Plot 6	23,090	230,400	496,400

On the west side of the square, corner of Summer street and Atlantic avenue, is the site of the Brown building, assessed to-day for $188,400. This same piece of land in 1896, containing 3,140 square feet, was assessed for less than one-half that amount.

Increase on All Parcels.

A short distance from the Brown building is the Hecht building, also facing on the square. The building itself is assessed to-day for $110,000, as against $138,000 ten years ago before the present South Station was built. Notwithstanding this decrease in the value of the structure, the 23,090 square feet of land on which it stands is now assessed at a value of $496,400, or over 110 per cent. increase on the assessed value of the land in 1896.

The Cook building at the junction of Federal and Summer streets is located on 1,230 square feet of land that is assessed to-day for $67,600, whereas in 1896 the experts of the Board of Assessors placed the value at $30,800. The value of the site of the Weld building is to-day placed by the assessors' books at $302,800. These 10,094 feet of land in 1896 were valued by the experts at $150,000.

The plot of ground containing 17,139 feet, on which the Hathaway building stands, corner of Atlantic avenue and Summer street, in 1896 was valued at $188,500, and to-day the value of the land alone has increased to $377,000.

Applies to Other Districts.

Many more parcels of land might be mentioned to show the great increase in land values that followed the erection of South Station. But these half dozen will suffice to prove the argument advanced at the opening. It is true that this is a business district. The same principle applies, however, to the dwelling district as well. The value of the land increased because, by improved rapid transit facilities, it became more accessible.

In buying his plot of land the wise wage earner will give preference, where he has [illegible] opportunities to buy [illegible] conditions are otherwise equal, to the plot in the locality that is the most easy of access or where signs indicate that improved rapid transit may be expected.

SOCIETY TO BE VERY BUSY BETWEEN NOW AND LENT

With the return of the smart set to town, plans are immediately being put under way for its amusement, and [illegible] Lent is earlier this year than usual, the long array of gay events must be crowded into the short space of time between now and the sackcloth-and-ashes period. Aside from the assemblies which take place this year on the evenings of January 4 and February 8, several minor events are already scheduled.

The Animal Rescue League Fair, which is always a strong drawing card for both the older and younger members of the smart set, will be held the first week in December in Copley Hall and will continue three days. Members of the Sewing Circle, debutantes and Vincent Club girls will be in evidence at the booths and in the restaurant, which will be under the direction of Mrs. Mary F. Blake of the Lud[illegible]

This promises to be a busy season for the Vincent Club for, besides their fair which they are giving in Copley Hall [illegible] the 27th, and their annual show, which takes place late in the Winter, many of the members are to take part in the [illegible] given for the Ellis Memorial in Jordan Hall [illegible] in December. Miss Mary Curtis, one of the finest dancers of the club, will give an Egyptian dance, which promises to be the feature par excellence of the performance. She will be gorgeously gowned in Egyptian costume and will wear a [illegible] of the Egyptian jewels which she has collected during her trips abroad. She will be assisted by a corps of the cleverest dancers the Vincent Club can produce.

Bacon [illegible] York, Mr. Filley, captain of the winning crew, Amory Hodges, of New York, and Robert Herrick. No doubt every man who has ever rowed on a Harvard University crew will endeavor to be there, as it will be the largest as well as the most [illegible] occasion of its kind held at Boston for many years.

Among the most prominent debutante affairs of the season will be the large ball which Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stow Bradley are to give for their charming young daughter, Rosamond, at the Somerset in December. Miss Rosamond, like her sister, Leslie, and brother, Robert, is a member of the New Riding Club and is [illegible] outdoor sports. She is a dainty [illegible] with exquisite coloring and a [illegible] alertness of expression. She dresses with exquisite taste, and with her beauty and the large number of pretty frocks which have been brought over for her first season she will no doubt create considerable of a sensation.

Max Heinrich, the most popular of artists, will be the attraction at the three morning musicales to be given under the direction of Mrs. S. B. Field in Potter Hall, beginning Nov. 22. Mrs. Charles A. White will accompany Mr. Heinrich on the piano.

The Girl who travels ALONE

IT was the proud boast of all zealous Americans for many years that this was a country in which a young woman might safely travel from sea to sea without a companion, as chivalrous were our men, so helpful and hospitable were our women. Europeans, hearing this boast, often remained unconvinced.

This theory held good up to a decade or two ago. Could it be confidently counted upon at the present day?

An answer to this question will be found in Eleanor Gates's series of articles on "The Girl Who Travels Alone," the first instalment of which appears in this issue of the Cosmopolitan. This magazine has presented many articles on social conditions, but in none has there been so widespread and vital an interest as there will be in "The Girl Who Travels Alone." And this is for the reason that the problem reaches into every household where there are girls to safeguard.

Miss Gates, who is the author of that charming study of Western life, "The Biography of a Prairie Girl," and of the no less carefully drawn "Plow-Woman," is a young woman of the West, who has also lived several years in New York. She has crossed the continent eight times. When she tells of the experiences of the lone girl traveler, she knows what she is writing about. At the same time her work is done with the delicacy of a graceful and uplifting womanhood.

WIFE'S LOVE LOST; ASKS $100,000.

Fred M. Haley of Lynn Sues Alden M. Sleeper, Both Rich, for Alienation.

SUIT FOLLOWS AUTO TRIP IN MOUNTAINS

HUSBAND IN COLLAPSE CAUSED BY TROUBLE

Filing of Suit a Surprise, and Friends of Two Families Are Astounded.

An alienation suit for $100,000, brought by one wealthy business man of this city against another, threatens to disrupt two families prominent in society and has caused the sensation of years in Boston, Lynn, Swampscott and other fashionable North Shore resorts.

The plaintiff and the defendant were old friends and the legal action follows an automobile trip through the White Mountains, which ended a few weeks ago.

Fred M. Haley of No. 34 King street, Lynn, is the plaintiff, and asks the court to force Alden B. Sleeper of the Castle Leather Company of No. 83 South street, a very wealthy resident of Swampscott, to pay him a fortune on the grounds that the latter has won away the heart of Mrs. Haley. The accused wife is now at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leighton at No. 849 Beacon street and in a sob-broken voice declared yesterday that she knew nothing about the matter.

Haley in Collapse.

Mr. Haley is said to be at his home in a state of collapse over the trouble which has wrecked his home. The eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Haley is with her mother.

No intimation of the character of the evidence upon which Mr. Haley sues Mr. Sleeper for such a large sum is given in the papers in the suit filed in the Essex County Superior Court at Salem yesterday. The attorneys engaged in the case will not talk.

"Do not ask me to say anything about this matter," said Attorney Frank H. Stewart of No. 6 Beacon street, counsel for Mr. Haley. "It is unprofessional for a lawyer to discuss the case of his client, and in an action like this it would be doubly so."

Attorney Benjamin N. Johnson of the law firm of Johnson, Clapp & Underwood, of No. 50 State street, who will appear in defence of Mr. Sleeper, declined to make any statement whatever. "I have no time nor desire to discuss the case," was the most he would say.

When a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter called at the Beacon street home of her father, he was informed that Mrs. Haley was confined to her room, and had refused herself to all callers. A maid took to her a note, asking that she would give her version of the trouble which had led her husband to accuse Mr. Sleeper of alienating her affections. Mrs. Haley did not show herself, but her voice was plainly audible when she said between sobs:

"Tell Him I Don't Know."

"Oh, tell him I don't know anything about it. Oh, tell him I don't know anything."

There were tears in the eyes of the maid when she returned with Mrs. Haley's refusal to be questioned.

"Mrs. Haley is a dear, kind lady," said the maid.

There was no intimation of trouble between Mr. Haley and Mr. Sleeper until the suit papers were filed. This action astounded mutual friends. The families had been intimate for a long time and that jealousy or any other feeling disturbed the Haley household was not suspected. Neighbors near the Haley home have noticed that Mrs. Haley has not been seen there for several days. It is understood that she left for her father's home about a week ago. She is a handsome woman about thirty-five years old. Her beauty is of the brunette type—she is a superb figure and fine dark eyes. Mrs. Sleeper, wife of the defendant, is a short, slender woman and has not been active socially as Mrs. Haley. The Sleepers have one son. He is a year old.

Mr. and Mrs. Sleeper were not at home when a reporter called there. It is said that the South street leather merchant is out of town.

"I'm Surprised," Says Father.

"I am surprised at the suit," was all

"LID" OFF IN N. Y.: GAMBLERS LINE UP FOR RICH HARVEST

Closed Joints Now Assured That They Will Not Be Molested

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Nov. 10.—Interested observers in the Tenderloin have noticed that the "lid" which was clamped down at least on one side for a few days, has begun to tremble and start upwards. And now comes the announcement that in forty-eight hours it will be way off and the town wide open.

Word has gone out along the underground wires that everything is "right," and Monday morning bright and early the few big gambling houses that have been closed will open up and begin to reap [illegible] harvest with absolute certainty that they will not be molested.

The Tenderloin has not yet made up its mind whether the "open" tip will apply as fully to the pool rooms as to the gambling houses. But they will open up at the same and take their chances. They [illegible] rather [illegible] of late.

"There are not more than ten in the whole upper Tenderloin, and about half of these are protected by injunctions from "police interference."

$80,000 ALIMONY IN CASH: $3000 PER YEAR FOR DIVORCEE

Connecticut Judge Gives Wife of Yale Professor's Son Largest Sum on Record in State.

Bridgeport, Ct., Nov. 10.—Judge Shumway's decree of alimony in the Sanford divorce case, in which Mrs. Samuel S. Sanford, Jr., sued her husband for absolute divorce, orders, besides the immense alimony to the wife, an annuity of $1,000 to her baby son.

The court orders that Mr. Sanford pay his wife $80,000 before December next, $3,000 during each year of her life, and $1,000 a year for the support of the infant, Samuel S. Sanford, second, who is in the custody of his mother.

The sum of $1,000 a year for the child is to be paid until he reaches five years of age, when the amount is to be increased to $1,200 annually. The sum in alimony is said to be the largest ever granted by a court in this State. The divorce decree was obtained by Mrs. Sanford several weeks ago. Mr. Sanford is the son of Professor Samuel S. Sanford of the musical department at Yale.

MRS. PALMER SAID TO PLAN BUYING NEWPORT ESTATE

Chicago's Society Leader Reported to Be Negotiating for Purchase of "Wakehurst."

Newport, Nov. 10.—Society is stirred by the rumor which has crept out of real estate circles that Mrs. Potter Palmer, the society leader of Chicago, is negotiating for the purchase of "Wakehurst," the magnificent Newport home of James J. Van Alen. It is one of the largest and most costly cottages in the cottage colony. This is taken to mean that Mrs. Palmer, who has made great social strides in Europe, where she has been entertained by royalty, will be very prominent in society here in Summers to come.

When Mrs. Palmer occupied the Villa Arcligh several Summers ago she won her way by personal charm and tact. Then she went abroad and was presented at court and made a tour of triumph. She has been much and pleasantly discussed by society leaders here and several times gossips have set going the rumor that she was to marry again. The late Potter Palmer was a typical American who made a great fortune in Chicago, a city of which he was intensely proud, by qualities which no society man ever possessed.

DENIES $350,000 HOUSE IS WEDDING GIFT TO DAUGHTER

Society Gets Curious When Commodore Gerry Makes Big Transfer.

New York, Nov. 10.—Society folk wondered to-day if Miss Angelica Gerry was to be married, taking their clue from the fact that Commodore Elbridge T. Gerry had transferred to his daughter as a gift a $350,000 house and lot at No. 816 Fifth avenue.

"No, this is not a wedding present," said Mr. Gerry, when he was asked about it. "My daughter is not engaged to marry any one. I guess a man may give his property to his children if he wants to."

Miss Angelica Gerry and her sister, Miss Mabel Gerry, are leaders in the younger social set here and in Newport. They are accomplished musicians and Miss Angelica is famed as a waltz. Two engagements have been broken by Miss Gerry. Her betrothal to Wadsworth Ritchie was announced in 1900 and later her marriage to Worthington Whitehouse was said to be on the cards.

THREE SHOT TWO DEAD, 1 DYING.

MAINE GIRL'S FACE IS FILLED WITH BULLETS

COLLEGE LAD AT ANDOVER VICTIM OF REVOLVER

Friend Was Placing It in Pocket When It Is Discharged.

Two boys are dead and one girl is in a dying condition as the result of accidental shootings yesterday. In each case the shooting was done by friends, careless in the use of their firearms. The dead are:

J. B. Tracy, seventeen years, of Mount Vernon, N. Y. Killed at Andover.

There was no celebration when Phillips-Andover triumphed 6-0 at foot ball yesterday over Phillips-Exeter. In one of the student boarding houses on the Hill lay the body of John J. B. C. Tracy, '10, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., seventeen years old, who was accidentally shot early in the day by his chum and classmate, Charles E. Riggs of Emporia, Kansas.

Held in $1,000 Bond.

In Judge Mahoney's court at Lawrence, Riggs was held in $1,000 bail for examination on Monday. Chief of Police Frye of Andover gave his personal recognizance for the lad, who has been in a condition bordering on collapse ever since the shooting. Judge Mahoney said that all the evidence before him indicated an accident.

Young Riggs had loaned his revolver to Harry Hilton, another collegian, who had left it at Riggs's boarding place, the Cheever house, in Main street, while Riggs and Tracey were at chapel. The two chums stopped at Riggs's on their way to classes. When they entered Riggs's study the latter called attention to the return of the pistol, he says, and then started to place it in his pocket. He had first to remove some keys, and while he was about this the revolver was discharged and Tracy was shot in the mouth. The bullet penetrated the brain and the boy died almost instantly.

Careless With Gun.

Allen Bradbury of Newburyport, eighteen years old, died yesterday at the City Hospital in that city as the result of an unexpected discharge of a shot gun in the hands of Isaac Forsey, his friend and hunting companion. They were getting ready to go after duck.

Forsey, standing three feet from Bradbury, was loading the gun. It did not close readily, and Forsey gave it a sharp jerk to lock the breech with the result that charge was exploded, hitting Bradbury.

Bradbury, who was a son of Lincoln Bradbury of the Newburyport Fire Department, made an ante-mortem statement to the effect that the shooting was an accident, completely exonerating his heartbroken friend.

Girl Shot in the Face.

Edith Moore, 12 years old, is in a serious condition at the Maine General hospital, Portland, as the result of some schoolboys going "hunting" quite like men.

The Moore girl belongs at South Windham. She was homeward bound from school, with a girl companion, when some boys who had been gunning crossed the road in front of them.

BONI HOPES TO DELAY DIVORCE

PARIS DREADS NAMES WILL BE PUBLISHED

Lawyers Argue Case Will Fail Unless Persons Involved Are Designated.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Nov. 10.—Count Boni de Castellane circulated his clubs to-day in the most buoyant mood which has animated him since his much abused American wife sued for divorce. The cause of his elation is a rumor which has swept Paris that the court will not grant Countess Anna divorce outright, but will delay matters by ordering a commission to investigate the charges and counter charges.

If this is done, it will drag proceedings for a long time, and if the Commission is more friendly to the Count than to the Countess, as is believed likely to be the case, it may eventually decide against the wife on the ground that names were not mentioned in the charges brought by her.

COUNTESS DE CASTELLANE FROM PAINTING BY CAROLUS DURAN.

May Dash Countess' Hopes.

When M. Bonnet, attorney for Count Boni, raised in court the point that it could not consider the allegations upon which the Countess bases her plea for divorce unless the names of women and the places where Boni met them were specifically mentioned, he made a move that may dash her hopes to the ground.

It is believed that the Countess and the Goulds are not willing, even as the price of a separation from such a spendthrift and profligate as Boni, to cause a cyclone in Parisian society. If names and places are mentioned the revelations which will follow will disrupt society to a greater extent than any proceeding since the French Revolution. Public policy is involved in this and, though the Count is a member of the Royalist party and the Government is Republican, there is a feeling in the highest circles that this case has reached a point where its effects may be as disastrous to the country as was the Dreyfus affair.

Creditors Also Against Divorce.

Boni's creditors are another powerful clique who are actively conspiring to prevent a divorce. They want to keep the Countess chained to her dissolute husband, because they recognize in her wealth alone is there any chance of their being paid. Count Boni owes so much that in this another question of public policy is involved. It is better, Parisians say, that the American woman should endure humiliation, insult, cruelty and fist blows than to have tradesmen lose money through Boni's inability to squeeze the payment of his debts out of the wife he has abused and beaten.

It is believed by the Count and his lawyers that sooner than risk causing numberless duels, bankruptcy and the blighting of the reputations of many noble dames that the court will seek to avoid granting a divorce by naming a commission of inquiry.

Count Pierced by Ridicule's Shafts.

Ridicule has done more to damage Count Boni in the estimation of the Parisians than all revelations of his dissolute life. The publication of his letters caused such laughter in the polite circles he effects that even imperturbable Boni winced. It was a great joke to the gay boulevardiers that he had written to the American wife whom he had struck in the face, after squandering $8,000,000 of her money.

"Do not let me die alone like a dog."

"Oh, take me back. I have always loved you."

"If you had suffered like me you would have been dead long ago."

"Do your great dark eyes hold no pity?"

Count Boni is unquestionably a man of physical courage despite his effeminate appearance and the prospect of his being called to the field of honor by at least a dozen injured husbands, if the Countess makes public the names of all the women

SOCIETY GIRLS START RIVAL TO VINCENT CLUB

Like the explosion of a bomb in social rank, comes the exclusive announcement of the formation of a new club among society girls, which is to rival the far-famed and ultra fashionable Vincent Club.

The new organization, which came into existence suddenly and without warning, will not only include many members of the famous Vincent Club, but will enroll the names of many decidedly smart young women who have hitherto eschewed affiliation with any club.

The Vincent's rival rejoices in the euphonius and mystifying name of "The Weeks Lougee." Miss Lilian Clapp, daughter of Mrs. E. H. Clapp, of Beacon street, has been elected president. The object and aim is to be broadly philanthropic, taking in hand any deserving charity which may need exactly the efforts of such an organization.

The gates of "The Weeks Lougee" do not stand open to any passing stranger. Admission will be quite as difficult as it is to the elder sister club.

Will Give Theatricals.

Cleverness will rank on a plane with social standing, for, like the Vincent, the new club will raise the money for carrying out its schemes by annual theatricals.

Among prominent Vincent club members already enrolled in the new club is Miss Marion Smith, whose remarkable singing voice has made her indispensable whenever any Vincent Club entertainment is given.

Miss Smith will be one of the stars of first magnitude when the Weeks Lougee gives its first entertainment in January.

She will also sing at the Swiss fair, to be given by the Vincent Club girls in Copley Hall this month.

No [illegible] and no internal friction in the Vincent Club can be discovered as responsible for the formation of the new club.

"There is no reason why there should be only one club in Boston that can do things," is the reason given by one of the club's founders.

The Vincent Club membership has grown so large in recent years and the members are so uniformly capable that the excess of ability is almost too much for one club and there is plenty of material in the rank and file to furnish leading spirits for another active set of charity workers.

Will Not Conflict.

The work of the two organizations will in no wise conflict.

The Vincent Club's efforts are specific. The club is named in honor of "Dear Old Lady Vincent" of Boston Museum fame, and the funds raised by the members go to maintain the Vincent Hospital on Chambers street.

The Weeks Lougee will be more catholic in its good works and bend its energies toward any worthy and [illegible] charity.

The situation is most interesting, and society is anxiously awaiting the first public appearance of the two members.

Hitherto there has been only the Vincent Club and interest and patronage has been undivided. The rivalry will undoubtedly spur both clubs to supreme efforts.

GIGANTIC TROLLEY DEAL.

New Haven Railroad Said to Be Planning to Get Rhode Island System.

WOULD CONTROL ALL LINES IN THE STATE

INTERESTED PARTIES MAINTAINING SILENCE

If Plans Go Through New Haven Road Will Rule Entire Territory.

As a result of a meeting of the directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, held at the South station yesterday, one of the most gigantic railroad deals ever attemped in the East has been made.

A deal is understood to have been consummated between the New Haven road and the United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia, by which the Consolidated is to acquire all competing street railway lines in Rhode Island and adjacent parts of Massachusetts.

With the announcement of the deal made in the Stock Exchange yesterday, Rhode Island Securities rose to 61, a record price.

It was known that the New Haven directors were meeting in secret session but after the business was concluded, not the slightest word could be obtained as to what transpired. Marsden J. Perry, the Rhode Island street railway magnate, who controls all the street railways of the State, refused either to deny or affirm the report that the New Haven road was seeking to secure the stock of the Rhode Island Securities Company, the holding company for the Rhode Island street railways.

Admission by Mellen.

Robert W. Taft, one of the New Haven directors, seen at Providence, refused to have a word to say as to what transpired at the meeting.

The prevailing opinion among stock brokers yesterday was that the deal had been consummated, and that very likely the top notch price of the stock had been reached.

President Mellen admitted that his road was endeavoring to obtain control of the seventy miles of street railway system in and leading to Woonsocket, known as the Ray system. These, prominent bankers and brokers say, are but a stepping stone to the acquirement of all trolley roads that figure in any way as rivals for the business of the New York, New Haven & Hartford corporation, which proposes to thus crush all competition.

Rhode Island securities stock was selling at [illegible] at the time of the announcement that the New Haven road was endeavoring to gain control of the trolley lines which the company represented. It gradually rose to 50 and then broke to [illegible] when it was reported that the deal was off. In the latter part of October the stock again took to soaring and it has been on the upward climb ever since.

It was said yesterday that the New England Investment and Securities Company, recently chartered for the purpose of taking trolley roads, might hold the stock of the Rhode Island Securities Company, which controls the Rhode Island Company. The reason for this supposition is that the lines of the Rhode Island Company extend to North Attleboro and Attleboro.

Evade Intent of the Law.

The Massachusetts law is intended to prevent ownership of trolley lines by steam roads, and the New England Investment & Securities Company, although controlled by President Mellen and other New Haven directors, is not the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co. Therefore it is assumed that when the local trolley deal is closed the Rhode Island Company's property will be turned over to the New England Investment & Securities Co. for the purpose of complying with the letter of the Massachusetts law. The Ray system, which [illegible] the Woonsocket trolley lines, probably will take the same course, as indicated in a statement by President Mellen on the possibility of New Haven control of the Ray interests.

POLITICAL FUTURE OF A. F. OF L. IS PIVOTAL ISSUE AT CONVENTION

Labor Body, 25 Years Old, Opens Important Meeting at Minneapolis To-morrow Morning.

By Frank Keyes Foster.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 10.—The American Federation of Labor, which [illegible] session is to open in this city Monday morning, has just completed the first quarter of a century of its existence. During this period it has [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] its supremacy is unquestioned [illegible] the authoritative head of the American labor movement. With its millions of affiliated [illegible] far-reaching [illegible] unionists [illegible] thought [illegible]

History Analogous to Country's.

The history of the federation is strikingly analogous to that of the [illegible] of the sovereign States of the American Union, placing the various crafts affiliated in the same general relation as the States bear to the [illegible] the same tendency of the central government to magnify [illegible] Thomas Jefferson [illegible] the rights [illegible] so greatly curtailed [illegible] With the exception of [illegible] term the president of the American Federation of Labor has always been a staunch advocate of a decentralized government for that organization.

Differences of Opinion Expected.

There are, nevertheless, a good many people who are anxious to know what these representatives of the American wage-earners are going to do about some [illegible] important [illegible] all of one [illegible] elected by the [illegible] tions throughout the United States and Canada, men of settled convictions and long experience [illegible] deliberative bodies.

It may safely be assumed that the future political policy of the federation will be the pivotal point [illegible] Will the new departure of the [illegible] past year [illegible] demands of labor [illegible] either indifferent [illegible] or hostile be sustained? Will the convention go for [illegible] advocate the formation of an independent labor party, with distinct nominations and party machinery of its own? Will it follow the opportunist policy of the [illegible] party [illegible]

To Exercise Independent Ballot.

Of one thing there is slight doubt, and that is that the trades unionists of America are ready for the exercise of an independent ballot. They are [illegible] convinced that the real issues [illegible] are concerned [illegible] political platforms [illegible] made upon the [illegible] They feel that their [illegible] legislative demands have been persistently juggled with.

It is therefore not a question of the [illegible] it will [illegible] and [illegible] in this country.

Delicate Task for Convention

On the other hand, it is not at all likely [illegible] to [illegible] that the federal labor would [illegible] essential [illegible] even the present [illegible] toward such a movement. It will be pointed out that the constitutions of many of the largest and most powerful [illegible] guarantee [illegible] political and religious freedom of action to [illegible] to identify [illegible] with any political [illegible] would be a [illegible] solution of the difficulty.

100,000 MAY BE INVOLVED IN RAILROAD STRIKE.

IMPORTANT CONFERENCE BEING HELD TO-DAY

A general tie-up of the big steam railroads entering New York City, including the New York, New Haven & Hartford road, is threatened if the demands of the engineers, firemen and trainmen for increased wages and readjustment of hours are not granted. A more startling crisis has never before faced railroad management, the traveling public and commercial interests of the country.

Officials of the various railroad brotherhoods to the number of [illegible] are in New York to-day holding conferences with the railroad officials and endeavoring to reach some agreement that will be satisfactory to the underpaid, overworked employes.

Break in Negotiations.

Negotiations have already been broken with one of the roads, the Erie, and a strike on that line in any event is almost a foregone conclusion. Seventeen hundred men on this line alone will be affected and it is said that a general strike on all the roads would affect directly over 100,000 men.

President Underwood of the Erie road flatly refused to accede to the demand of the firemen for a redution from twelve to ten hours a day at the same wages for the ten hours work. Grand Master John J. Hanrahan and the members of his committee at once held a meeting and decided to break off negotiations with the road. Some of the members of the committee declared that a strike was imminent.

A poll of the Erie firemen will be taken on the strike question. The result of this poll will determine whether or not the men will walk out. A sympathetic strike of the engineers and trainmen, it is expected, will follow and extend to the other lines.

Other Roads Affected.

The roads affected besides the New Haven and the Erie, are the Lackawanna, the New York Central, and the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

A fact that has given some confirmation to the reports that a widespread strike is imminent is the presence of Grand Chief Warren M. Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers in New York City, where the several conferences are being held at the Broadway Central Hotel. Secret sessions of the representatives of the different brotherhoods were in progress [illegible].

Grand Chief Stone's attendance at the conferences is significant for the reason that only to consider some critical situation would he be called from his headquarters in Cleveland.

Officials Silent.

For presentation these officials refused to discuss the outlook.

Another feature of the conferences now going on that has given rise to the talk of a widespread strike that will affect the New Haven road as well as the others [illegible] the Broadway Central Hotel conference of a dozen [illegible] road. This is [illegible] the engineers of [illegible] road officials at New Haven or Boston.

To Line Up Conditions.

"What we are trying to do in the East is what you might call a move to level up conditions of employment under which [illegible] work on the various roads. It is part of a general [illegible] movement which has for its [illegible] to so arrange matters that the [illegible] participate in the very [illegible] the railroads [illegible] present time the [illegible] wages, hours of [illegible] and so on [illegible] made uniform and [illegible]

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Costs Nothing To Try.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

HOUSEMAID-HEIRESS TO $60,000 FORTUNE.

Wealthy Uncle in Germany Leaves Fortune to Girl Employed as Domestic in Lowell.

Lowell, Nov. 10.—After working for a year as a housemaid in the home of Dr. Elmer P. Porter in this city, Miss Lillie Allen started to-day for Germany, where she will receive a fortune of $60,000 bequeathed by her wealthy uncle who died a few days ago in Berlin. Miss Allen is twenty-five years old. She is very attractive; a quiet, unassuming girl, who when she heard of her good fortune, said: "I will try to make good use of the money. I know what it is to be poor."

Lillie Allen came to Lowell a year ago from Montreal, where she was born and [illegible]. Her mother is [illegible] and [illegible] a number of years ago her brother, William Isenberg, a prosperous merchant of Berlin, visited the Allen family in Montreal. At that time Lillie was eleven years old and she became a favorite with her wealthy uncle.

"What would you do with a great fortune if you had it?" Isenberg asked his [illegible] one day.

"I'd keep it," replied the child in [illegible].

This unexpected answer so pleased the [illegible] that he mentioned it frequently during his stay, and when he returned to Germany he promised that he would not forget "little Lillie."

A few days ago Miss Allen was notified that her uncle had died and that he had left her a portion of his fortune. Miss Allen engaged an attorney to investigate [illegible] and yesterday was notified to go to Germany at once in order that the estate might be settled. In company with [illegible] who came on from Montreal, she left to-day for Berlin.

SEEKS $100,000 IN COURT FOR LOSS OF WIFE'S LOVE

that Henry Lindsay, father of Mrs. Sleeper, would say in regard to the trouble. It is said that the storm which threatens to wreck domestic peace has been brewing only a month, and that before the joint automobile trip to the mountains by both families there was no discord between them. Mrs. Haley was very popular in Lynn and Boston society. She was regarded by those who knew her as essentially a "home" woman and a charming hostess.

Mr. Haley is interested in an extensive millinery establishment at No. 21 Temple Place, Boston, and is about forty years old. Mr. Sleeper is a year or two his senior. Mr. Haley's father-in-law was formerly connected with the George M. Wetheren Company at the same Temple Place address, and in commercial circles, it is understood, that he aided his son-in-law in becoming a partner in the concern with which he is now connected.

Both Mr. Haley and Mr. Sleeper are members of the fashionable Oxford Club in Lynn and the suit was much discussed there last evening. Friends of both men profess complete ignorance of the details upon which it is based and believe that nothing definite will be revealed until it is heard in court.

Calls Charge Absurd.

According to former Mayor William A. Hastings of Malden, who is connected with the Castle Leather Company, Mr. Sleeper did not visit his South street office yesterday. Mr. Hastings also said:

"We only know here that a suit for $100,000 has been filed against Mr. Sleeper by F. M. Haley for the alienation of his wife's affections. We who know Mr. Sleeper realize how absurd the complaint is. I do not know Mr. Haley personally, but I do know Mr. Sleeper, and I am sure that the charges are unfounded."

73 HOURS AT SEA IN AN OPEN BOAT

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 10.—After seventy-three hours in an open boat, during which time they suffered pangs of hunger and thirst, the captain and crew of the barkentine Marion C. of Bridgewater were picked up off Cape Sable by the steamer Farmand of New York, bound for Miramichi, and brought to this port. The Marion C. was bound for New York from Bridgewater, and in the terrible storm that has been sweeping this coast sprung a leak. On November 4 the captain and crew left the sinking vessel in the boats and tossed in the stormy seas for nearly two days. When the Farmand hove in sight they were nearly dead from hunger and exposure and had almost given up hope.

LABOR HAD LARGE PART IN ELECTION

Pawtucket, Nov. 10.—Election returns demonstrate the important part played by the labor unions in the verdict of the people. It was a quiet vote, but it counted just the same, and the action of the local Central Trades and Labor Union, with which all of the minor unions in the Blackstone Valley are affiliated, in declaring an indorsement of the Democratic candidates was really one of the most important factors in the result. In this city one labor union man was elected to the General Assembly.

FORMER SALEM MAN.

SALEM, Nov. 10.—Telegrams received last night announced the death at San Rafael, Cal., of Joseph A. Harding, a former resident of this city.

NET TIGHTENS ABOUT POISON SUSPECT.

Police Declar[illegible]dence Is Complete A[illegible]nd Who Tried to K[illegible]amily.

TRACE BIT BY BIT DETAILS OF THE PLOT

Springfield, No[illegible] two days of hard effort on [illegible]sterious case of wholesale poi[illegible] has ever startled this c[illegible] to-night expressed confidence that they have secured the evidence [illegible] solve the attempt to end [illegible] seven members of the W[illegible] homestead.

Though [illegible] they are practically sure [illegible] conviction, Inspector W. J. Q[illegible] handling the case, admits [illegible] missing and attempts to fa[illegible] reason for the crime has [illegible].

Grains of Arsenic

have been used in [illegible] according to the analysis made by Dr. H. C. Emerson and Chemist F. W. F[illegible] Emerson laboratories. They [illegible] only the small amount of [illegible] saved eleven persons.

Lodged in the Ha[illegible]ty jail on York street, Mrs. [illegible] Shipley, the cook, stoutly maintains [illegible] innocence and defies the prosecution [illegible] convict her. Though ad[illegible] she baked the bread and [illegible] fact that only she handled the flour, she asserts that the bread was mysteriously dosed by some unknown person.

Locate Store That Sold Poison.

The police have located the drug store in which the arsenic was bought. They regard that fact as a master stroke, and are reticent in either affirming or denying that they have secured identification of the purchaser of the arsenic.

One of those poisoned [illegible] seriously ill, A. H. Kimball [illegible] confined to bed at his residence, [illegible] street. Those who have recovered [illegible] are still weak from the effects produced by swallowing the poison are Mr. and Mrs. Willard P. Leshure; their children, Willard, 5 years old and Barbara, [illegible] Hugh Deane, Mrs. Leshure's [illegible] Lewis, Miss Fannie Grundy, [illegible] Lyons, A. H. Kimball and Dr. Em[illegible].

"I do not believe th[illegible] were all poisoned through any malice [illegible] but I believe that insanity [illegible] from abnormal conditions prompted [illegible]," said Willard Leshure to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter. "If the innocence of Mrs. Shipley is proved [illegible] whole sale poisoning will be probed to the limit, and the guilt must be de[illegible] placed somewhere. I don't want the lives of my family and self in jeopardy all the time.

Two Attempts Made Before.

"I feel no ill effects now, though all of us suffered terribly. It was not the first instance in which an attempt had been made to poison us, for on two previous occasions within the past two months this family has been taken ill from poison inserted in our food."

All attempts by Inspector Quilty to wring any admission or confession from Mrs. Shipley by either cross-examination or "the third degree" torture have utterly failed. She is a veritable female Sphinx and the police admit that her coolness in face of damaging evidence is puzzling.

Society Stirred at Crime.

Society circles are considerably stirred over the poisoning, the Leshures being noted as one of the most aristocratic and wealthiest of the families of Springfield's smart set. They occupy an imposing mansion at 501 North Main street. For thirteen years Willard P. Leshure's father was chief of the Springfield Fire department.

Dr. H. C. Emerson, when interviewed by the BOSTON AMERICAN REPORTER said:

"I have thoroughly analyzed the poison in conection with Chemist F. W. Farrell and found that seven grains of arsenic was scattered in the flour that made the batch of bread which caused the poisoning.

"I am one of the victims myself. I tried a small piece of the bread to see how strongly it was dosed and was taken ill. It is simply marvelous that all the victims recovered after eating so much poison."

COUNTESS ANNA IS FEARFUL OF FATE IN COURT.

she has accused, is giving him much less concern than his inability to find money for dinner parties and other festivities of which he is fond. He is an accomplished swordsman and about the only exercise he gets is foil or rapier play with fencing masters.

Galled By Lack of Money.

But his lack of money galls him sorely. He was the most prodigal Parisian of his time. He has squandered more than 40,000,000 francs in dissipation and lavish living within fifteen years and owes $4,000,000 besides. Now tailors come with duns instead of solicitations to order garments and there is a swarm of creditors at every corner he turns. But Count Boni waves them aside with a princely gesture.

"Do not disturb me—it is nothing. I will attend to you in time," is the most they can get in the way of settlement. Creditors are not all bitter with Boni—it is his wife whom they objurgate. Count Boni would pay if he could and order much more, they say. But she, the American woman whose family had nothing but money, seeks to ruin the honest French tradesmen who have trusted her noble husband. Her conduct in not paying all Boni's bills is perfidy indeed in the eyes of his creditors.

But if his income has ceased Count Boni still remains one of the most daudified and best groomed men in Europe. He presents an immaculate appearance on the street, at the club or in the drawing room. His debonnaire self is still presented in his old haunts and he has not been cut in the Faubourg St. Germain. That this will be the case [illegible] Countess Anna obtains a divorce and society learns that he is an irretrievable bankrupt is another question.

105, CASTS 41ST VOTE FOR GOVERNOR

Aged Citizen Goes to Polls With Young Man Who Is Not Quite 90.

Newport, N. H., Nov. 10.—James Bowles McGregor, who recently celebrated his 105th birthday, cast his forty-first ballot for Governor in the recent election. Mr. McGregor has never missed a presidential or gubernatorial election since he was old enough to vote. He was brought from his home at North Newport to the polls by Colonel Seth M. Richards in his automobile. Accompanying Mr. McGregor was Ezra T. Sibley, who is a near neighbor and who will be ninety years old next February.

WEDDING DELAYED BY UNCLE SAM WILL TAKE PLACE TODAY

GIRL WHOSE WEDDING WAS DELAYED BY U. S. NAVY

One true woman's heart fluttered with joyous anticipation yesterday, when the battleship New Jersey steamed into Boston harbor, just home from Cuban waters. Miss Helen T. Evans of No. 1 Maywood street, Roxbury, waited impatiently for her Jackie sweetheart, James Brien, the chief machinist on the monster battleship.

After many disappointments, the young couple will be married to-day at the bride's home, and in the wedding is the culmination of a strange romance.

The bride-to-be is very pretty and popular in social circles in Roxbury. She has been engaged to Mr. Brien for some time, and the couple planned to wed several weeks ago. Their plans were rudely shattered one day, when the Navy Department of the United States government, which knows no sentiment, ordered the New Jersey, then lying in Boston harbor, to sail away for Cuba, where the insurrection of the natives threatened American interests.

With an aching heart, good sailor Brien packed his kit and hurried for his ship. His sweetheart was sadly disappointed and fearful that harm might befall her fiance. She sat down and wrote to Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte, pleading that her lover might be excused from duty in order to be married on the day decided upon.

But Secretary Bonaparte knew only one word, and that was "Duty." So he sent this telegram to Miss Evans:

"Regret sincerely no action possible. New Jersey has already sailed."

He also wrote a letter to the young lady, expressing to great length his regret.

But all's well that ends well. The sailor has returned from his voyage unharmed, and wedding bells will ring right merrily in Roxbury to-day.

Montpelier, Vt., Nov. 10.—The body of Glenn Wright, the five-year-old Barre boy who was supposed to have been kidnapped, was found at 11:30 [illegible] in a well [illegible] the piazza of the Wright [illegible]. The condition of the body indicates that the boy was drowned early yesterday afternoon.

PUBLIC DEFIED BY POLICE RING.

Although Providence Has Democratic Mayor, Plan Is Still on to Promote Matthews.

INTERESTING TIMES AHEAD POLITICALLY

Providence, Nov. 10.—With a Democratic Mayor and a Republican Board of Aldermen the political manipulation for the coming vacancy in the Board of Police Commissioners promises to reach an interesting stage before the first of the year.

When the Republican ring secured the passage of the act by the Legislature last Spring, giving the Board of Aldermen the power to reverse the Mayor's appointment of commissioners at its discretion, a contingency such as has resulted from the election this year was contemplated. Notwithstanding the fact that Mayor McCarthy was elected by well over 2,000 votes, he can have no more [illegible] preventing the promotion of Chief [illegible] Matthews into a berth that will [illegible] king him chairman and a [illegible] of the Providence P[illegible] than if he had not been elected.

May Force Gross Out.

Ever since the two-sided verdict on the conspiracy case brought against Chief Matthews by Rev. A. B. Christy last Summer, when he was retained in power for his previous good record, there has been a persistent report that he would succeed Commissioner Harold J. Gross, whose term expires the first of the year.

Colonel Gross, who is chairman of the Republican State Central committee, has not yet discovered whether or not he is going to be shelved when his term expires.

The name of Roswell G. Smith, an ex-member of the city government, is now mentioned as a possible candidate for the position against Colonel Gross. This is looked upon as a part of the game to put up so formidable a fight for the place that Colonel Gross will be persuaded to retire, when the field will be cleared for the candidate pledged to do the bidding of the machine.

May Lose Appointments.

Not only will Mayor-elect McCarthy be voiceless in the Police Commission question, but there is also a plot on foot to strip him of some of the authority the office of Mayor has heretofore enjoyed. It is reported that the appointment of committees is to be taken out of the hands of the Mayor and placed in control of the Board of Aldermen.

LAWYERS START FOR BAY OF ISLANDS

St. Johns, N. F., Nov. 10.—The Newfoundland government dispatched a lawyer to Bay of Islands to-day to direct the persecution of colonial fishermen who have shipped aboard American vessels. Another lawyer, who will defend any persons prosecuted, also went to Bay of Islands. It is understood that Americans are contributing to a fund for this purpose.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and, mind you, this old fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article and sold by druggists and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin diseases as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers" will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers, a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

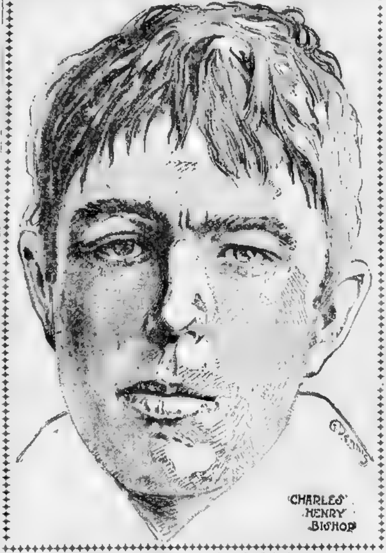
BOY SLAYER CONFESSES AND GLORIES IN HIS DEED



Sketched by Boston American Staff Artist.
CHARACTER STUDY OF BOY SLAYER.

Coolly Tells Detailed Story of How He Killed Woman Who Befriended Him for Her Money.

Stafford Springs, Ct., Nov. 10.—Glorying in the most brutal crime that has been committed in this State for many years, Charles Henry Bishop, eighteen years of age, is locked up in the Tolland County jail, facing death by the hangman's noose for killing Mrs. Henry Williams.

The boy does not seem to appreciate the enormity of his act. Since his arrest and confession he has not shown a symptom of remorse nor of fear of the consequences. He declares that he did a "good job" and that he is willing to stand the consequences.

To Be Examined for Sanity.

The probabilities are that he will be examined as to his sanity before he is put on trial. What aggravates the case is the fact that Bishop was befriended by the woman whom he beat and stabbed to death. She and her husband took him from an institution in Massachusetts, and were taking care of him as though he were their own child.

He has confessed how he killed the woman for the money she had, and the only thing that can save him from the executioner is proof that he was mentally unbalanced when the deed was committed. Here is the story of the crime that he told to a reporter of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN:

"I quarreled with Mrs. Williams on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. She wanted me to bring in wood and I refused to.

"Shortly after 1 o'clock I returned to the house and another fight arose between us on the same subject. I left the house hurriedly and then resolved to kill her.

"After spying around the house I waited until she got busy in the kitchen, then opened the door on the sly and sneaked in. She was washing the [illegible] and never heard or noticed me.

Struck Her with Stick.

"I crept up behind her. I got along all right. She never dreamed that I was near her. I was wondering how to make the attack. Suddenly I noticed a heavy stick in the wash boiler.

"It was a hickory stick about three feet long and two inches thick. I grabbed the stick and hit her on top of the head with all my might several times. She fell to the floor. She did not speak, but [illegible] and they seemed to be [illegible]. She gasped for breath a number of times.

"Then for the first time I was scared. I knew that I would have to finish the work. I ran to a table. I caught up the largest knife there. It was the carving knife. I went back to the woman and I cut her throat. I kept at it until I was certain that she was dead. But to make absolutely [illegible] I stabbed her in the forehead several times.

"Then I got a towel and tied it about her throat as tightly as I could. That would have strangled her, anyway.

Ransacked the House.

"Some coins were jingling in her dress when she fell, and I cut the pocket out of her dress. I got $4, money that Edward Jacobson, a neighbor, had paid her for milk.

"I ransacked the house next, looking for money [illegible]. I turned everything in there upside down to make it look as if burglars had been there.

"I broke open her trunk and got her [illegible] back [illegible]. It was an iron box. I split that and got about $20 in change. [illegible] I [illegible] slipped [illegible] running from the house. I ran and hid the money in a grease box under a tree in the woods. Next I warned the neighbors and told them I had just returned to the house and discovered Mrs. Williams killed.

"I'm not afraid of jail or the consequences. I've done it and I'll have to stand for it.

"I had everything carefully planned. I was confident I could escape. I was sure I could baffle the police and throw them off my track, yet stay under their noses.

"No, I don't know as I am so sorry. I'm willing to stand the punishment. I'm game."

DEMOCRAT HELPED ELECT OPPONENT

Central Falls, Nov. 10.—The action of Mayor McNally in running for a re-election this year on nomination papers, after his party convention had named Timothy J. Riley as its candidate, had more to do with the election of the Republican candidate, Joseph W. Freeman, than anything else. The vote for Mr. Freeman was greater than the combined vote of Messrs. Riley and McNally, but this was because there were many who had become disgusted with the factional quarrels in the Democratic ranks.

In all other things the voters showed their allegiance to the Democratic cause, [illegible] Mayor Higgins of Pawtucket re[illegible] a largely increased plurality over [illegible] given a year ago for Dr. Garvin. In [illegible] they elected four Democratic [illegible] of the Legislature, instead of letting the Republicans have two of them, as in 1905.

The Countess de Susini threw open her residence, No. 1077 Beacon street, Friday [illegible] for charity's sake, and from 3 to [illegible] a benefit tea was given under the [illegible] of the New England San Francisco [illegible] fund, of which Dr. Gertrude T. Bodfish is founder and president, for [illegible] made destitute by the San Francisco disaster and also for the orphans that [illegible] institutions in San Francisco before the earthquake.

[illegible] patronesses of the tea were Mrs. [illegible] Hall, who was gowned in black [illegible] large picture hat, and Mrs. Caleb [illegible] who wore lavender silk. Countess de Susini, who occupied the seat of honor at the head of the table, wore an exquisite gown of two shades of lavender, and diamonds sparkled in the priceless lace of her bodice.

Viscountess Juanita, the daughter of the countess, was in pink silk with white [illegible], and Dr. Bodfish was gowned in lavender chiffon. Mrs. A. [illegible] black silk with Valenciennes [illegible] and Miss Harriet Be[illegible] of the organization, wore a [illegible] with white lace sleeves and [illegible] was also a deep red, with [illegible].

The organization, of which Mrs. Micah Dyer is the honorary chairman, was asked to raise $5,000, but Dr. Bodfish hopes to bring the sum up to $10,000.

A delightful entertainment was given by the following: Miss Inez Story, pianist; Miss Amy Sloan, violinist; Miss Emma Rice, vocalist; Miss Jessie Eldridge, reader. Tea was served by a group of young girls, gowned in white and assisting the countess to pour were Mrs. Wasgott, wife of Dr. Oscar Wasgott, and Mrs. Alexander Marr.

HIGGINS FIRST CATHOLIC GOVERNOR IN NEW ENGLAND

RHODE ISLAND HONORS GOOD SON OF CHURCH

[illegible] R. I., Nov. 10.—Governor [illegible] H. [illegible], who is next to [illegible] of [illegible] State [illegible] Union, is also the first Roman [illegible] Governor of any New England Commonwealth.

Mr. Higgins has just [illegible] of the most remarkable [illegible] waged in Rhode Island. In the war [illegible] "Braytonism"—in other words the boss rule and corruption which has so long [illegible] the State—the young Governor [illegible] bore the brunt of the battle. His stirring speeches, his earnestness and intellectual force, stirred the voters as he toured the Commonwealth as they have not been aroused for years. Their result [illegible] manifest when the returns of [illegible] election were in and the Pawtucket man was declared a winner over Governor Utter, in spite of the powerful machines which were unscrupulously and lavishly used by the Republican State machine in the latter's behalf.

[illegible] his boyhood [illegible] has [illegible] broad-minded and tolerant to the [illegible] of [illegible] waverers in the support of his faith.

Remained True to Creed.

Throughout his boyhood, during his college course at Brown University, the foremost Baptist college in this part of the country, whose commencements are conducted in the historic first Baptist Church, during his law course, when for inspiration he turned to Congressional halls and to the masters of debate there assembled, and while following his public career as a State Legislator and Mayor of the city of Pawtucket, James H. Higgins has [illegible] deviated from the principles of his church trainings and has never wavered from the path of duty pointed out by its ecclesiastical guide posts.

It is regarded by Roman Catholics with peculiar satisfaction that the State whose first [illegible] of religious liberty [illegible] Roger Williams should be first [illegible] adherent of a creed that [illegible] the widest divergence from the [illegible] professed by every [illegible] chief executive in the history of New England.

Walked Three Miles to Church.

Born January 22, 1870, in the village of Saylesville young Higgins had to travel [illegible] early boyhood something like three miles to church, his parents being communicants of St. Mary's church, in this city. When the boy was eight years old, the family moved to Pawtucket, and James became a regular communicant at St. Joseph's church, one of the largest and most prominent of the Roman Catholic churches here. He attended St. Joseph's [illegible] the [illegible] side and graduated [illegible] had [illegible] such [illegible] in his studies that he was made the valedictorian of his class. He attended the Pawtucket High school, graduating in 1894.

Entering Brown University that same [illegible] he went through the four years' [illegible] was graduated an A. Attended Jesuit College.

Tricked by Dyspepsia

The Doctor Couldn't Tell Where the Trouble Lay.

"For the past seven years I have been a victim of dyspepsia and chronic constipation and have consulted the most noted specialists to be found on diseases of this character. None, however, seemed to be able to [illegible] the difficulty or give relief. In addition to this medical treatment, I have resorted to the use of many remedies and have given them faithful trial, but all to no purpose.

"Upon the recommendation of a close friend I purchased a 50c package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and in less than five days noticed that I was receiving more benefit than from any remedy I had used before. I continued to use the tablets after each meal for one month, and by that time my stomach was in a healthy condition, capable of digesting anything which my increasing appetite demanded.

"I have not experienced any return of my former trouble though three months have elapsed since taking your remedy."

We wish that you could see with your own eyes the countless other bona fide signed letters from grateful men and women all over the land who had suffered years of agony with dyspepsia, tried every known remedy and consulted eminent specialists without result, until they gave Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets a trial. Like the doctor above, they couldn't locate the seat of the trouble.

Dyspepsia is a disease which has long baffled physicians. So difficult of location is the disease that cure seems next to miraculous. There is only one way to treat dyspepsia, to supply the elements which nature has ordained to perform this function and to cause them to enter the digestive organs supplying the fluids which they lack. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets alone fill these requirements, as is shown by the fact that 40,000 physicians in the United States and Canada unite in recommending them to their patients for stomach disorders.

We do not claim or expect Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to cure anything but disordered conditions of the stomach and other digestive organs, but this they never fail to do. They work upon the inner lining of the stomach and intestines, stimulate the gastric glands and aid in the secretion of juices necessary to digestion.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box. One box will frequently effect a perfect cure. If in doubt and wish more adequate proof send us your name and address and we will gladly mail you a sample package free. F. A. Stuart Co., 61 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

STOCKS ARE STAGNANT $1,500,000 Deficit in Bank Statement MONEY MARKET STRAINED

Secretary Shaw's Refusal to Make Deposits Sharp Disappointment to Wall Street.

The market has been in the doldrums this week. Tossed about by every caprice of the professional trader it has waited for the favoring breeze which it was ex[illegible] gentleman who presides over the destinies of the United States Treasury, and [illegible] ship of [illegible] ward [illegible]

Secretary Shaw [illegible] He has come to the rescue of the market before. He was expected to come again. Bankers were almost certain that [illegible] banks or refund [illegible] of the government bonds which fall due next April [illegible] of which the National City Bank has [illegible] a large number in New York with the expectation that the refunding would take place.

At 11.15 yesterday Secretary S[illegible] spoke. His message was not the one [illegible] Wa[illegible] contrary. It stated emphatically [illegible] would neither make deposits in banks or refund bonds unless business [illegible] were materially changed from [illegible] are at present.

Market Practically Dead.

Fifteen minutes later the New York bank statement was issued [illegible] the showing was a deficit of $1,500,000 against a surplus of $3,000,000 the preceding week. These two [illegible] out so ben[illegible] as likely to [illegible] market than [illegible] enced since [illegible] ment started [illegible] came practically [illegible] outside of a few leading specialties [illegible] to the lowest point of the week.

In the Money Market.

The closing of the week finds the money market somewhat strained, especially in New York. Firm rates are necessary there in order to [illegible] money to that centre, as well as keep it from going out. Some bankers fear that the money which has been [illegible] as the West is becoming more and more inclined to invest its money [illegible] The widespread speculation in Goldfield and other mining stocks has attracted much capital from the Middle West, and there is a possibility that [illegible] more money will be held there [illegible] has usually returned to New York [illegible] reserves at that centre.

Recent experiences have only served to [illegible] emphatically to the necessity of a change in the monetary system which must come to pass sooner or later. It is fundamentally wrong that one [illegible] of the Treasury should [illegible] in his hand the power to intensify or relieve the strain in the monetary situation of the country and only in this country is such a thing possible. A well authenticated rumor has been in circulation this week that some legislation will be introduced at the opening of the coming session of Congress to relieve this situation.

Money on call in Boston is seven per cent and in New York nine per cent, and the bulk of the business which is being done is in call money, time quotations being nominally six per cent to seven per cent [illegible]

Traders Look for Lower Prices.

BY THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

New York, Nov. 10.—Traders in Wall Street look for lower prices, and the superficial influences [illegible] seem to indicate a trend in that direction. But careful investigation fails to discover any reason for a declining market, and the best authorities will be very much surprised if the decline extends more than two or three points.

Secretary Shaw has practically invited the bankers to create a situation which will permit him to release $25,000,000. Mr. Shaw knows as well as anyone the injustice of the federal law which takes money out of circulation through the custom house at a time when it is needed in business channels. In depositing this money in the banks the government is not catering to anybody or making any concessions. It is merely returning to the public its money which ought never to have been taken away. Action by the Secretary is justified, if justification were needed, by the tremendous credit balance which the United States has in Europe.

The alleged financial authorities have been shouting themselves hoarse the last week over [illegible] which New York would have to make to London for stocks shipped to America as a result of a rise in the discount rate of the Bank of England. These financial [illegible] were all confounded yesterday when the bank statement disclosed the fact that loans, instead of increasing, had actually decreased. The stocks shipped to America came in part liquidation of debts due to the United States, and if the stocks had not come gold in equal amount would have been shipped. Europe still owes the United States far above $200,000,000 on balance. The United States is helping England and Germany out of financial trouble by postponing demand for money due.

Financial diplomacy makes it necessary for Secretary Shaw to withhold relief to such an extent as [illegible] the money rate in New York above 6 per cent. But it must be remembered that stock market panics have always been on cheap money, while high money has been accompanied with either steadiness or actual advances. If money rises much further stocks will rise with it.

THE BANK STATEMENT.

New York, Nov. 10.—The bank statement to-day was a bad one and the surplus reserve was once more converted into a deficit of $1,514,125. The decrease [illegible] money reserve was $8,831,300, [illegible] of required reserve was $4,267,400, so that the decrease in surplus reserve was but $4,563,900, the first [illegible] this late for very many years. The property known as the Jones place on School street, a two-story mansion, together with 30,000 square feet of land, assessed for $1,875, was sold to C. H. Fairbanks.

The double house on River street, on road from South Acton to Concord, together with 10,000 square feet of land, assessed for $1,800, was [illegible] purchased by the said C. H. Fairbanks.

Makes Three Purchases.

The double house on School street known as the Richardson estate, with half an acre of land, assessed for $2,200, and the Chadwick estate on Chadwick avenue, a two-story mansion and an acre and a half of land, assessed for $2,[illegible], the River street property known as the Jenkins estate, [illegible] quarter of an acre of land and cottage, assessed for $1,000, were purchased [illegible] A. Merriam of E. A. Merriam Co.

The estate of four acres in West Acton was purchased by Edward F. Richardson.

The Edward T. Harrington Company reports further the sale in Winthrop of No. 11 H[illegible] street to James S. Foley of East Boston, and of a lot of land on the west side of Bates avenue [illegible] of Newton; also the transfer of the estate No. [illegible] Marsh[illegible] street, Roxbury, from Frederick F. Savage papers have gone to record for the sale of No. 148 Foster [illegible] the Archie Leonard country farm on Bay road, Easton, and of an estate of 18,000 square feet on High street, Mansfield. Agreements have been signed for the sale of No. 42 Howle street, Melrose [illegible] This firm has also [illegible] a farm of fifty [illegible] acres located on School street, Mansfield [illegible]

Many other sales and [illegible] transfers, etc., reported during the week of property in and around the city of Boston indicate a lively market for realty.

SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS
FORTUNE MAKER

Only 20,000 Shares left of the richest and most profitable investment stock on the market.

Five cents a share until midnight, Thursday, then 100% advance.

Eighty Acres in Goldfield, Mohawk, Ore Belt, where fortunes running up into millions have been made.

You buy this week at five cents and we challenge any company, even at 50 cts. a share, to show as rich properties. Why should you pay fifty cents when you can get better for five?

GOLDFIELD
LEDGE MINING CO.

5c {Without question the greatest purchase on the market. Located in the GOLDEN TRIANGLE of Rich Mines.} 5c

We advised our Customers to invest in ten Goldfield stocks surrounding Gold Ledge. Those who did so realized a Fortune.

These are the Ten which showed Profits of $7,587,500, from October 20th to October 27th:

	Value Oct. 20, 1906.	Value Oct. 27, 1906.	Profit.
Mohawk	$4,500,000	$8,050,000	$3,550,000
Red Top	1,550,000	2,650,000	1,100,000
Jumbo	1,475,000	2,850,000	1,375,000
Laguna	480,000	820,000	340,000
Atlanta	550,000	780,000	230,000

Combination Fraction	1,000,000	1,460,000	460,000
Columbia Mountain	370,000	500,000	130,000
Jumbo Extension	581,250	693,750	112,500
Oro	185,000	280,000	95,000
Total gain			$7,587,500

The question for you to decide is: Can I afford to let an opportunity like this pass by? Suppose you had invested $140.00 in Mohawk a year ago, that same investment today would be worth $17,000, and you want to remember that this property is a short distance from this famous mine, and you want also to remember that our property shows as rich, if not richer, ore at the same depth than many of the richest mines in the camp.

There are twenty mines in Goldfield surrounding the Goldfield Ledge, anyone of which has made enormous returns to stockholders. Mohawk one year ago 15c a share, now $17.00. Red Top 25c, now $3.95. Jumbo the same price as Gold Ledge, 5c a share, now $4.05, and many others that we might mention that have made from 100% to 500% profit for their fortunate holders the past year.

Fortunes in

Nevada gold mines are made in a few weeks! The summer, even in the Mohave Desert, is over. The time for active development work is now. Nearly two thousand miners are at work with pick and shovel in Goldfield camp alone.

New strikes are reported daily. Big values uncovered send prices of stocks soaring. The profits resulting from rise in price of only ten stocks in Goldfield alone amounted to over $7,000,000 in one week.

But Production and Actual Dividends tell the story.

THE TRUETT LEASE on the Mohawk Mine in Goldfield paid a dividend of 25 per cent. in October. As the stock was sold at 25c a share, every stockholder got all his money back in the first dividend.

The Tonopah Mining Co. paid its third quarterly dividend of 25 per cent. Oct. 13 and an extra dividend of 10 per cent. on Oct. 30—$950,000 so far this year on only about $700,000 of outstanding stock.

The Combination Mine in Goldfield has paid $48,000 a month in dividends for some time. In all it has distributed $688,000 to its fortunate stockholders.

The Consolidated
Nevada Mines Syndicate
At 40c a Share

I consider the safest and most desirable investment in the whole range of Nevada gold stocks. This company's holdings are located not in one but in ten of the best camps in Nevada. It controls not a few claims but 2400 acres, enough property for fifty mines.

Its production should be greater than the Mohawk, the Belmont or the Combination—it should pay even larger dividends.

I believe this stock will go to par in a short time and inside of a year will be selling for several dollars a share!

On the basis of its actual holdings it should be selling for $8 a share now. At 40 cents a share [illegible] on the ground floor with an opportunity to increase your investment ten—yes, twenty times in as many months to say nothing of enormous dividends to come.

I advise its purchase unreservedly and at once. In a week or less you may have to pay twice 40c a share.

BRITISH COLUMBIA AMALGAMATED COAL COMPANY, OF PORTLAND, OREGON.

Secretary and Treasurer, A. B. CROSMAN, Ex-Postmaster of Portland, Oregon.

The first allotment of treasury stock, at the introductory price of 25c. per share, has all been sold and disposed of. The public has responded most generously, and our shares have been subscribed for by men and women in all walks of life, and lately the big investors have commenced to look up our proposition and invest heavily.

BRITISH COLUMBIA AMALGAMATED COAL WILL BE ADVANCED 100%

After the 15th of this month the price will go up to 50c. per share.

YOUR LAST CHANCE.

The 25c. price will hold good until the 15th of this month, and we earnestly advise you to call or write for prospectus and further particulars, which will be furnished by us at once.

The investment will prove to be most remarkable, from a financial point of view, and the shares you can to-day buy for 25c will be worth that many dollars in a few years, and will provide a source of income that will increase in value from year to year.

"To See the Opportunity and Grasp It in Time Makes a Man the Master of His Destiny."

DO YOU REALIZE

That these shares may be worth $100.00 in seven or eight years from now, and that 1,000 shares, which you can to-day buy for $250.00, may reach a cash valuation, within a few years from now, of $100,000.00.

There never was a failure in coal in the Western States and in British Columbia. There are no "ifs" about coal, providing quantity, quality and transportation are assured and the business is managed right and honestly.

Our company controls 17,500 acres of coal land, estimated to contain hundreds of millions of tons of coal. The supply is so great that the engineer who has made the estimates says that the supply would last for many hundreds of years, no matter how extensive the output would be.

Our coal is a high-class bituminous coking coal, and free from sulphur, and makes the best furnace and smelters' coke in Canada and the United States. The coal generates a heat of about 14,050 British thermal units, and is equal to the very best bituminous coal in the United States, such as Cumberland and Pocohontas, whose coal averages from 13,000 to 14,000 heat units (British thermal). The average assay runs as follows:

Fixed Carbon, 61.47; Volatile, 31.42; Ash, 3.85; Moisture, 3.2[illegible]; Sulphur, none, and the coke averages: Fixed Carbon, 92.00; Ash, 8.00, and carries no sulphur.

The British Columbia Amalgamated Coal Company will commence active operations early next spring, and one of its four properties will be equipped with the very best of machinery and up-to-date apparatus to mine coal on a big scale, the aim of the company being to equip one of the mines and place it on a producing basis at an output of 3,000 tons of raw coal per day. This we expect to have accomplished by the latter part of next summer, and a year thereafter there should be a handsome dividend paid to the stockholders. This dividend will increase from year to year, as the enlargement of the output will keep pace with the demand, and coke ovens will be erected, and in a few years the British Columbia Amalgamated Coal Company will have all of its four coal properties equipped and producing coal and coke on a large scale. The officials of the company are all determined to make this a grand success, and we cordially invite you to join us in this great enterprise.

We are now about to employ one of the best-known geologists and coal mining engineers in Pennsylvania to have charge of our work and select the machinery and the equipment needed for our operations.

We furnish the best of bank references, and ask you to call at our office, or write, for further particulars.

Ryan in Silver Mines.

One of the interesting reports of the week from the Cobalt is that Thomas F. Ryan and his associates intend to make extensive investments there. Grant Hugh Brown, who is supposed to be an agent of the Morton Trust Company of New York, has just returned from Cobalt, where he has purchased several properties, presumably for the Ryan group of financiers. The public perhaps is not familiar with the fact that most of the big financiers of Wall street are heavy investors in mining stocks.

J. P. Morgan has a fortune in mining shares of which one never hears. James Speyer is said to have extensive holdings in producing mines. The big [illegible] of South America, which is owned by George [illegible] of Pittsburg and his associates, has [illegible] stock of $5,000,000, and not a dollar of it is for sale. John W. The American Car and Foundry interests in the McKinley-Darragh-Savage company have broadened the scope of operations, and while pushing work on the mines already owned it is said that they will make the company a holding concern, and take in other proved properties in the region.

Canadian capitalists and several London bankers of international reputation have become interested in this property.

Dollar Stock Now 35c a Share; Was 25c; Will Soon Be 50c!

Look Us Up.

We realize that many concerns are offering their stock, and it is not always the most meritorious that meet with the greatest success. But we caution you as an intelligent investor to "look well before you leap."

Behind the Geyserite Mfg. Co. is one of Colorado's greatest merchants. Its stockholders comprise some of the leading statesmen, men who have been or are now honored with foremost positions—a U. S. senator, a governor, a leading U. S. Government official, any number of professional and buisness men, publishers of daily newspapers, etc. Is a proposition that is good enough for these people good enough for you?

Prominent Directorate.

Among the prominent Coloradoans who interested themselves financially in this enterprise are Frank A. Joslin, a well-known Denver merchant; Hon. Harper M. Orahood, a leading member of the Colorado bar; Lieutenant-Governor Parks, President Daly, of the Capitol Life Insurance Company; F. G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Post; Crawford Hill, publisher of the Denver Republican; United States Marshal Bailey, and many others. It will thus be seen that the company has considerable standing and that there must be a substantial basis of fact. These men could not afford to be involved in anything that was not genuine.

We are offering the stock to you at the same price that others are paying for it, no more, no less. It is treasury stock, non-assessable, only one man is drawing a salary (the foreman of the factory), and all the money secured is being used to increase the sale and the profits of Geyserite Soap.

A few weeks ago you could have bought this stock at 25 cents a share; to-day it is costing 35 cents, if you delay still longer it [illegible] cost you 50 cents. BUY IT NOW.

Not a Probability But a Reality.

Don't confuse this with a hole-in-the-ground that may not contain the metal you are looking for, nor with an oil well that may never spout oil beyond its surface. These are probabilities. Geyserite Soap is a reality. It exists. It is being manufactured, sold and used. It is not a gamble or speculation. You can see it made, you can see it sold in the large stores of your city, you can see it used in households, offices, etc.

All we want of you is to assist us in raising the [illegible] to manufacture it on a [illegible] force a broader sale, a grea[illegible] and increased profits w[illegible] for you. Your spare money and your good will will accomplish it.

Backed by 15 Years of Steady Operation.

Geyserite Soap has been sold for 15 years. It was exhibited at the World's Fair and received highest awards. We know of Americans now living in Europe who send for it in $2 and $3 quantities regularly—they would not be without [illegible]

We want [illegible] your money into it, to [illegible] and in other ways to give [illegible] We on our part will further its sale throughout the world and see that your investment makes money for you.

With our energy and knowledge of the business, with the capital we are getting, and with the good-will of many stockholders widely scattered, the [illegible] success of this enterprise, on a scale equal to the greatest soap works, is assured.

Try One of Three Ways.

Presuming that you have read this announcement carefully through, we ask you to do one of three things:

1—Fill out the coupon and order as much of the stock for cash as your present savings will permit, or as much on the installment plan as your future earnings will permit, or

2. Send to the company for a copy of "Gold in Geyserite," the book that tells all about Geyserite Soap, with [illegible] in Nebraska, the [illegible] profits [illegible] stockholders [illegible] or

COBALT! COBALT!!

The following is a copy of a letter which was sent out in answer to an inquiry received about the ABITIBI AND COBALT MINING COMPANY.

We would say that without any question the properties owned by this company are very rich in silver and cobalt, and also as a conservative investment, there is no better property on the market today.

The writer has been over the properties through Cobalt, and is a mining engineer, consequently I can say that I consider the Abitibi & Cobalt properties are as rich as Nipissing, Foster or the Silver Queen, and when Abitibi & Cobalt commences to ship from its Mine No. 1, near Gillies Station, three miles below Cobalt Station, the price of stock will sell way above its present figure. Shipping will commence by the last of this month, as a shaft on Mine No. 1 is now down to a 35-foot level and is a working shaft. Timbering is now being laid preparatory to taking out ore.

There are five buildings on the main property, being a cook house, three sleeping camps and the office building. There is also a blacksmith shop and a compressor house being erected, and steam drills are being worked.

The engineers estimate conservatively that the first car load of ore will average $3.000 to the ton, or $60.000 to the car. Will state that there has never been a car of ore shipped out of the Cobalt district that ran less than $50,000 to the car, and owing to the strict mining laws of the New Ontario government, it is impossible for anyone, unless they care to run the risk of a heavy fine and imprisonment, to say that they have a mine unless they have, or to advertise the fact in any way.

The reason why the stock is so low at the present time—the market today being around 38 to 40 cents—is because the price is being held down so that the large holders of the stock can buy more BEFORE THE MINE COMMENCES TO SHIP, when it will be impossible to buy stock at this figure.

The capitalization of the company is $2,500,000, par value $1.00 per share. The stock is non-assessable, and there is no personal liability.

In addition to these great ore bodies the drill records show good ore almost continuously to a depth of 200 feet, a large part of it is very rich.

Official records show that in this district it costs less to mine the ore, returns are safer and surer than in any other mining district in the world.

There are millionaires in Joplin to-day who were working with a pick and shovel a few years ago. The Joplin district produces about 90 per cent of all zinc ores produced in the U. S. and about 27 per cent of the entire world's product. The total cash value of zinc and lead mined in this district in the year 1905 was $13,532,125.

The sure way to make money in mining stocks is to grasp your opportunity when stocks are low. Take advantage not only of the dividends, but of the various jumps in the market price of your stock as development work progresses. All the United Standard Lead & Zinc Company wants is money enough to put up mills to concentrate their ore. You must remember that the development work is practically completed, and by the time the mill wheels begin [illegible] will be declared. This means that stock you are buying to-day at 5 per cent. per share, should jump to $1.00.

BANKERS WILL VOUCH FOR US

The officers of this Company refer by permission to some of the best known banks in the West.

They want the investors to feel absolutely sure that the money sent [illegible] will be used for the purpose of developing the mine. There are no salaried officers.

They have put their own money into the property and have proved it to be rich [illegible] asking the public for [illegible] to build [illegible] mills.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS.

L. F. PITTS, Kansas City, Mo., President; Ex-Clerk United States District Court. Personally refers to Western Exchange Bank, Kansas City, Mo.; First National Bank, Jasper, Mo.; Bank of Carthage, Carthage, Mo.

J. D. RIDDELL, Kansas City, Mo., Vice President and Treasurer; Former General Freight Agent Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis Railroad. Personally refers to New England National Bank, Kansas City, Mo.; Fidelity Trust Company, Kansas City.

HON. GEORGE F. QUINBY, Joplin, Mo., State Inspector under three governors, and all who have written the letters in this advertisement.

We Want to Put Five Mills on This Great Property—In a Hurry

According to [illegible] report of Hon. Geo. F. Quinby, mining engineer who was state mine [illegible] three governors, this one mine should supply [illegible] which would give an output of 50 to 70 tons of zinc ore [illegible] would be from $[illegible] to $[illegible] per week. [illegible] expenses and you have left $1,450 to $2,[illegible] week clear [illegible]. As the [illegible] one-sixth of [illegible] reason that there should be at least four or five [illegible] property. Figured on the same basis, five mills would yield [illegible] $[illegible] to $11,7[illegible]. This would mean a yearly net profit of [illegible] $[illegible],000 clear and clean above all expenses, or from 12 per cent. to 20 per cent. on the entire capitalization of the company, which is about $3,000,000.

Such [illegible] record as this would make you rich, would make your stock worth par. [illegible] par.

MINING HAS BUILT MANY GREAT FORTUNES

Nothing [illegible] offers large returns as [illegible]. Probably you do not realize how many people there are who are [illegible] a regular income as a result of investing in mining stocks. There are thousands of them, and they are largely those who bought their stocks when the opportunity was first offered to secure shares at a low price before the company had begun to pay dividends. Stocks of many mining companies have advanced from a few cents a share to prices ranging from $100 to $1,500 a share in value, and besides have paid back to the investors in dividends many hundred times what they first invested. Many of the companies are paying from 100 to 1,000 per cent. in dividends on the first price of the stock. To grasp this opportunity and purchase stock in the United Standard Lead & Zinc Company at 5 cents a share means success to you, and that means house, good living, travel, education and social privileges for your children. If you do not grasp this opportunity and secure a good share of wealth you are likely to be classed as a failure. This proposition is in the hands of men whose ability and integrity cannot be questioned, and these men pledge themselves to see that each and every investor in this enterprise receives an equal division of the profits. Experts have examined the property and it is the universal opinion that it has a wonderful future.

United Standard Lead & Zinc Co., City.

Gentlemen:—I think you have a mighty good mine on your fifty acre tract. I have been working there for the past few weeks and I was much surprised to find so much good ore as there is. A good mill ought to pay big on that property. I don't think anybody will make a mistake taking stock in your company, as you have so much ground there you can run several mills for a good many years. Your ore is the highest grade and will always bring top prices. [illegible] people have made [illegible] of money [illegible] ground that did not look half as good as this does. Yours truly,

She has tried to make us believe that she is rich in artistic treasures [illegible] time she tried to [illegible] she was rich in sol[illegible] she might have saved [illegible]. It is impossible to [illegible] the gleam of artistic [illegible] 750 canvasses which the Russian [illegible] committee have hung upon the [illegible] of the Grand Palais.

The first pictorial demonstration of Russian thought which we see dates from the eighteenth century, but it is totally lacking in originality. It is a pale imitation of French art of the same period. Borovikovsky's portraits, about which some over-enthusiastic critics have gone into ecstasies, are utterly uninteresting, with the exception of the one of the Emperor Paul I, and this looks as if it had come straight from the studio of David, or Gerard.

IRISH UNITE TO MAKE SUCCESS OF BIG FAIR.

International Exhibition Has Ample Guarantee and Is Progressing Rapidly.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American

Dublin, Nov. 10.—Great enthusiasm has been aroused in Ireland by the support which is being given to the international exhibition of 1907. Not only are Irishmen of all classes united to make it a success, but foreign countries are also sending exhibits to help in celebrating the great industrial revival which the exhibition represents. Speaking of the progress of the undertaking, M. James Sharks, the chief executive officer, says:

"The exhibition is supported by manufacturers, merchants and traders all over the country. It has a sound financial basis, with a guarantee fund of $5[illegible],000, signed by nearly 1,000 subscribers, and on that security the Bank of Ireland has agreed to advance funds [illegible] purposes of the exhibition.

Well Supported at Home.

"No previous exhibition in Ireland has had so much money behind it, and nothing of equal extent was ever projected in this country. Nearly 75 per cent of the guarantee fund has been subscribed in Ireland, over 60 per cent of the entire space [illegible] has been applied for by Irish manufacturers and merchants, and several of the exhibition buildings are already practically completed.

"When so many prominent Irish manufacturers and merchants of all creeds and [illegible] have shown their willingness to [illegible] take this arduous [illegible] they have acted throughout on the [illegible] imposed upon them by the great meeting at which the exhibition was launched [illegible] their manifest duty to carry to completion on the original [illegible] great project purely commercial and [illegible] ance. If there are any [illegible] for an exclusively 'National' exhibition, they are quite free to pursue that object.

Managers Have Been Careful.

"The executive committee of the international exhibition have steadily and consistently persevered with the project publicly intrusted to them, and have been most careful not to provoke censure or hostility. They have been supported [illegible] institutions. Nationalists as well as Unionists, and they believe that in bringing the exhibition to the successful conclusion now assured they will have done much to assert the power of rational public opinion in Ireland."

I Have Made Millions of Dollars for Thousands of People by My Patents

I expect to make millions more. This stock has increased in value more than 50 per cent. in one year, and should make you a life income, in handsome dividends. Be a safe and sane investor and get as much of the stock as your means will allow. The natural increase of business and inquiries for motors has forced the price of stock up several times; it will soon go higher. I have moved my office direct to our new factory at 133 South Clinton Street, and I am there every day from 9 to 5 o'clock

SPECIAL NOTICE The Bidwell Electric Company has received inquiries by mail and at their office wishing to know [illegible]. We wish to state that we are not connected with any of the electric railroads, [illegible] or any other of the various companies or persons advertising, promoting or conducting the same.

The Bidwell Cold Motor will Double the Capacity of any Motor

I never made an unsuccessful invention. My first invention was the electric fan just as it is run all over this country in hot weather. I didn't get a patent on it, but see what a tremendous success it is!

I next invented the Trolley Car System, just as it is run to-day. I made it perfect and successful right from the start. It has never been improved since I invented it. Look at the millions of money it has made for the stockholders. The stock in the trolley manufacturing companies sold below 15 cents a share in 1893 and 1894. Poor men could buy that stock then. Thousands of them did buy it and every one who held on to it is a rich man to-day.

Next I invented the Railway Car Telephone System. It is a system by which passengers or train crews can telephone from stalled or moving cars anywhere the same as if seated in an office. It is a more perfect system in operation than any other telephone you ever saw. This is on the road toward millions for the stockholders.

Inventor of the Trolley Car System.
Inventor of the Gearless Motor.
Inventor of the Railway Car Telephone System.
Inventor of the Bidwell Cold Motor.
Inventor of the Water Electric Generator.

THIS IS MY GREATEST INVENTION.

Now I have invented something bigger and greater than either of the above. It is called the Bidwell Cold Motor. It is guaranteed not to burn out and is exactly the kind of a motor the steam railroad people have been looking for. It will change all the steam railroad systems over to electric roads, because it will be cheaper to run than steam and can be run faster and more safely than any present method.

The one drawback the railroads have had in changing over to electricity has been that no motor as at present made can be run 250 miles at 60 miles an hour without burning out. It would melt the very wires.

By using the Bidwell Cold Motor a train of cars could be run from New York to San Francisco without a stop at the rate of 80 miles an hour and not even warm up and without a hitch.

Besides running faster they would be more safe and sure than steam, cost less to operate, and would last longer than any other motor now known.

The Bidwell Cold Motor is the greatest invention out since I invented the trolley car.

DON'T SPECULATE—INVEST

The Opportunity of a Lifetime.

I want to give every man and woman a chance to come in with me on this, for I expect to make millions for the stockholders out of these new patents.

The stock will be sold on the square. There will be no hocus pocus about the preferred or common stock, nor any other scheme, trick or wrinkle by which anybody can be frozen out.

Every dollar invested will represent one hundred cents of the best stock. Every share will be exactly like every other share. The profit on every share will be the same as the profit on every other share. In short, there will be nothing but a square deal all around. This stock is fully paid and non-assessable.

I have a lifelong reputation for square dealing. I will personally see to it that every stockholder gets a square deal on this. More money is made every day by good judgment in investing [illegible] all the labor and wages in the country. [illegible] cents in this stock will make fortunes.

[illegible] wages. No one ever did. Every man [illegible] big money got it by sound investment [illegible] safe [illegible] and it is sure to bring you returns.

Here Is an Important Point to Remember!

There never has been a failure of consequence in electrical manufacturing. Stop and think of that. All are immensely successful. All pay big dividends and have made their investors wealthy.

This is bound to be so, because there is not a place now where a motor or generator is used but will have to sooner or later change for the Bidwell Cold Motor or Generator. Why? Because we make something better than any other kind known.

Hetty Green, the Richest Woman in the World, Says: "The Way to Get Rich Is to Invest in Necessities."

The Bidwell Cold Motor is one of the greatest necessities of the 20th century. This stock has already taken ten jumps up. Now is the time to buy. It will soon jump again. The profit is yours. Don't speculate—invest. Here you have a necessity. I will supply the greatest necessity now known in the business world. The demand is so large that it will make us all rich. If you want to get in with me on this you will have to act quick. The stock is selling like hot cakes.

THESE ARE COLD FACTS—YOU MUST ACT QUICKLY

A Life Income for You.

If you want some of this stock at the present low price you must come in now. There is only a small amount to be sold at the present price.

I firmly believe that within five years the stock will be selling at $3 a share. This is your opportunity. It is a case of come quick or not at all. I am at the office and factory, 133 S. Clinton St., every day from 9 to 5 o'clock. Call and see me and let me explain anything you do not understand. As to our reliability and financial standing we refer you to any commercial agency.

In order to make it possible for every man and woman to get in with me on this big deal I have decided to sell the stock for a short time only at the following prices:

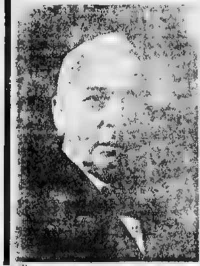
HAVE YOU PROVIDED FOR A RAINY DAY?



GEORGE W. WILSON,
Well-Known Chicago Business Man.

What a comfortable feeling comes over the man who provided against the "Rainy Day!" He does not have to worry about the old age problem, his living is sure; he knows that he can take care of himself, and those who are dependent upon him, come what may. He knows that when that day comes when he is no longer able to fight the battle, he can live and enjoy life under his own vine and fig tree and enjoy peace and plenty.

There is just one sure way of providing for the rainy day, and that is to make a fortunate investment. It is not possible for a man to save out of his earnings a sufficient amount of money to support him for any length of time. He must make his money work for him, and it must earn big wages. 3 per cent. or 6 per cent. or 10 per cent. will not do—his money must earn 50 per cent. and from that on up to several hundred per cent. So much for the introduction of our story; now for the story itself, by which we shall show a man where he may find a safe and profitable investment that will solve the rainy day problem.

We own a mine in Mexico, the property consisting of 6,000 acres of land, upon which is at least $200,000 worth of fine timber, plenty of water, and a mine upon which are FOUR TRUE FISSURE VEINS—all these veins lying within a space of 300 ft. across, and showing plainly on the surface by outcroppings for over a mile on the property. The property is located in Parral, in the State of Chihuahua, Mexico. It has suitable buildings for the housing of the miners, over 500 ft. of development work has been done, proving that the ore is there in almost inexhaustible quantities, running in values from $28.00 to $40.00 to the ton. 25,000 tons of ore are ready for the mill, and because it is the only mill in that district, which is one of the richest mining districts in the world, this mill will earn immense dividends from the custom work which will come to it from other mines in the vicinity. The average mining stock which is offered to an investor represents a promise; it is sold by promoters who expect to find something, and in a great many cases they act in perfect faith. We are not asking an investor to take any chances. We have a mine with a mill on it, and we have the ore and the timber and water, and now all that we need is sufficient money to start this mill going. We must increase its capacity, so that it will earn $2,000 to $6,000 per day, instead of $1,000 which it should earn at the present time when running at its full capacity. We want money to buy a stock of goods for our general store, for we are many miles from a railroad. We can sell everything at a profit of 100 per cent.

H. A. BIOSSAT, President,
For 15 years with Libby, McNeil & Libby.

In this advertisement we are not going to go into details for the prospectus does that, but the purpose of it is to get the investor who is looking for an absolutely safe place to put his savings to come to our offices to-morrow during the day, or in the evening—we are here until 7 o'clock—and let us present this proposition to him, as from man to man.

We have further safeguarded the investor by making an arrangement with the well known banking house of A. W. Jefferies & Co., Monadnock Building, this city, to receive subscriptions from out of town parties who might prefer to send their money to a bank rather than to strangers. You may rest assured that these bankers would not have consented to act for us unless they were convinced that the mine and the men back of it were worthy of confidence.

We started the price of the stock at a low figure. We advance that price beginning to-morrow to 10c per share on time payments. The number of shares that we will sell at these prices is limited; the stock should be selling to-day at 25c per share, for it represents assets that are tangible. The [illegible] issue may be subscribed to-morrow, or Tuesday, and it certainly will if the investors of this country who are looking for a clean-cut business-like and immensely profitable investment will investigate it. There are a great many stocks being offered to-day, and all that we ask is that you consider this one as carefully as we assume you will the others.

Amherst Men Tired.

In the second half Amherst men began to show the strain, and Captain Glaze directed his attack on the right side of Amherst's line, and again the backs tore through the line for ten and fifteen yard gains. NEW YORKERS WIN GAME, 16 TO 6

In Second Half the Home Team Braces and Takes the Lead Over Worcester Boys.

Special to Boston Sunday American.

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 10.—By the lucky [illegible] of a fumble Holy Cross was able to [illegible] Cornell this afternoon, [illegible] hardest game that has been seen on Percy Field this season. The visitors played a consistent game and with diligent defense prevented Cornell from making but [illegible] in the first period. This was [illegible] Dann, who was pushed over the [illegible] after a stiff battle to gain the five-yard line.

Shortly after the second half opened [illegible] made a sensational play which resulted in a score. In trying to buck the [illegible] on Holy Cross's forty-yard line, [illegible] fumbled. The leather fell at [illegible] feet, and picking it up he made a clear field ahead with a sprint that it was impossible to overtake, he sped down the field and dropped behind the goal [illegible] The goal was kicked, leaving the score Holy Cross 6, Cornell 5.

The Cornell supporters rose to their feet [illegible] with such cheering as has never before been heard here. The big Red team [illegible] into action which the visitors could not overcome. They pushed Holy Cross to the one-yard line, but a penalty for holding set them back twenty-five yards.

A fumble gave the ball to Holy Cross. [illegible] immediately forced to kick. Dann blocked it, and it rolled back toward the [illegible] where O'Rourke picked it up and [illegible] for a touchdown. Saver kicked goal. Again after hard fighting Cornell carried it to the five-yard line and Walters went over, making the score sixteen to six. The summary:

By Alexander C. Sullivan.

Before a crowd that occupied every available seat, and filled every inch of standing room outside the gridiron, the Andover [illegible] yesterday afternoon excelled [illegible] their big rivals of the year, Exeter, by a score of 6 to 0, at the Andover gridiron.

The game was one of the most [illegible] of the season, and so exciting were [illegible] at times that even the [illegible] of the fair sex arose in their seats and [illegible] with the enthusiasm of their [illegible] of the opposite sex.

Those who have been advocates of open play had their share of it in the game [illegible] played here. In fact there was [illegible] work, and many of the [illegible] play shook their heads in disappointment.

One Round of Kicking.

The battle between the miniature Crimson and Blue teams was one long round of kicking. There was so little [illegible] of the ball by straight formations that the contest [illegible] a basketball game more than anything [illegible]

The rival teams booted the ball about about every [illegible] They had the ball in their possession, and the only thing to vary the routine [illegible] was the [illegible] of the [illegible] pass. Sometimes [illegible] often it was [illegible] The [illegible] showed the [illegible] the new rules [illegible] forward pass, [illegible] of the players [illegible] so far as to [illegible] the ball directly [illegible] the hands of the enemy.

The Andover [illegible] the game through their ability to [illegible] their neighbor [illegible] superior to [illegible] time that the [illegible] close to the Andover goal the [illegible] kickers saved them.

Many Glaring Faults.

There were many glaring faults manifested by both teams, but it was in the kicking game that the Andover men were superior, and the new rules gave them a splendid chance to show it.

The battle was not a real football test, as nobody can truthfully say who saw the contest that man for man Andover is faster than her opponents, as the game developed so little real football play that a fair estimation of the comparative abilities of the two teams could not be made.

Even Money Bet on Game.

Andover and Exeter went into the affray which was the twenty-sixth between the two academies, at even money. It was the first time since they began to battle for gridiron honors that not one team or the other went into the battle a favorite. Therefore, there were no calculations [illegible] As a rule in the games the favorite is beaten.

Before the game supporters of the two teams could get little line on the two teams by the comparison of scores, as in the [illegible] games against the same [illegible] both elevens had done equally well. Andover [illegible] last year by a score of [illegible] to 10, and the team was playing on its own grounds, were facts in favor of the Blue, but that didn't influence any of the undergraduates to give odds on their team, and they picked up all the money in sight, dollar for dollar.

Crowd Arrives Early.

The crowd started to wend its way into [illegible] long before noon, and ten minutes before the time scheduled for the setto [illegible] they were still pouring in. [illegible] Andover [illegible] in a body [illegible] Academy Building, and [illegible] band, they marched [illegible] grounds where they went to [illegible] on the North side and then [illegible] cheer for their team.

Made the Welkin Ring.

During the entire game the Andover supporters made the welkin ring with their [illegible] and songs and band, and Barney [illegible] last year's baseball [illegible] credit for the [illegible] of [illegible] could be heard but [illegible] the splendid kicking of [illegible] of the winners, [illegible] his fine [illegible] for the victory for the [illegible] Merritt's playing [illegible] Daly's fine [illegible] to buck were other [illegible] the boys, coached by Dr. O'Connor, [illegible] former Dartmouth star, to win [illegible]

Captain Vaughn at [illegible] was on the go all the time, every [illegible] then pulling off some hair-raising [illegible] that he [illegible] went down [illegible] fault. Kenty did the [illegible] of the ball for the visitors and [illegible] his work [illegible] could not be compared with Haines, at his perfect [illegible]

Princeton's star kicker, Harlan, won the game for them. He made a goal from the [illegible] and a goal from placement in the first half. Princeton was unable to cross the Army line and make a touchdown, several times being held for downs.

VEEDER'S PUNTING IS THE BLUE'S SALVATION

Special to the Boston American.

New York, Nov. 10.—In a game free from line forcing, but brimming with dodging end runs, Yale wound up her series of preliminary matches to-day by smashing a solitary touchdown without a goal in amid Brown's superior distance gaining.

Forbes was the Trojan who bore the Brown rush [illegible] clinging to his shoulders [illegible] Morse [illegible] crush after Knox's snakelike [illegible] a broken [illegible] chance to strike at to Brown [illegible] try for goal was cast, but Knox missed [illegible] and the only scoring of the game had been registered.

Brown Led the Way.

From kickoff till the close of the first half the play was all Brown's. Johnny Mayhew was the lightning streak that [illegible] past the Yale ends for ripping gains till the Yale posts stood only [illegible] yards distant. In this half Brown tore the Yale defense to pieces for 140 yards, while Yale could gain [illegible] Brown by [illegible] strategy or force for only thirty-five.

Veeder's punting was again Yale's salvation, his work relieving the pressure on the Yale goal time and again. His punts averaged forty yards, [illegible] best traveled eighty. With the close of the first half the tide turned, and Yale took the aggressive. WANT 'FREAKS' BARRED FROM BIG RACE.

Opp[illegible] to [illegible] Compete for One-Mile Championship

[illegible] WON AT ORMOND TOURNAMENT

By J. C. KERRSCH.

In [illegible] freaks [illegible] steam [illegible] speed [illegible] termed freaks [illegible] no more freaks [illegible] racing machines [illegible] the weight [illegible] at the same time to possess [illegible] speed to earn [illegible] either a regular or [illegible] speed.

Protest Against "Freaks."

There has [illegible] raised more or less protests against these little cars, and some of the prospective entrants in the forthcoming [illegible] tournament have arisen and declared that unless some provision is made barring these so-called "freaks" from competition they will decline to make entries. [illegible] in this [illegible] every [illegible] for [illegible] advancement [illegible] such cars as the steam [illegible] competition [illegible] advancement is to be gained it is reasonable [illegible] why any fair-minded person should [illegible].

Still they do object, and on the ground that the so-called world's championships at sprint distances are as open to "freak" machines, [illegible] for the purpose as they are to [illegible] cars of regular design. It is [illegible] suggested that [illegible] built to [illegible] on straightaway level courses and [illegible] no use for any other purpose [illegible] in a class themselves [illegible] generally recommended that cars of the Vanderbilt type be catered to in contests of twenty-five, fifty and one hundred miles.

Steam vs. Gasoline

It is contended that so long as such cars as these are permitted to compete against the regular racing [illegible] for championship honors [illegible] never be [illegible] national [illegible] old question [illegible] which has been [illegible] It is said that if the rules governing such contests as the Vanderbilt and Gordon Bennett contests were enforced on this tournament it would be impossible to bring about a meet of freaks and regulars. Even those [illegible] not prevent starters from competing [illegible] style or [illegible] be, the [illegible] and [illegible] board of officials would permit [illegible] is manifestly unable to compete [illegible] without extraordinary danger to the driver or the spectators to compete in either the Vanderbilt or the Ormond tournament.

Under the present racing rules the promoter of a tournament is left no alternative in accepting entries, providing they come under the weight limit of 2,204 pounds. The matter of eligibility is left to the referee of a meet, who has absolute power to prohibit any car which he considers unsafe, unsuitable or of improper construction to start in any event. The referee is the all-powerful [illegible] the man who is given greater privileges and powers in certain directions than is exercised in the racing rules. There are [illegible] may object to this condition [illegible] however, a safe and wise one. It was [illegible] many years ago when at Ormond [illegible] was brought to the attention of the referee, and the board of officials [illegible] a close inquiry [illegible] stability [illegible] it was permitted to start [illegible].

Racing Board Should Decide.

The A. A. A. racing board should unquestionably decide as to what constitutes a freak machine and prevent such talk as was heard at Ormond [illegible] where had things gone to [illegible] there would [illegible] against a [illegible] it was [illegible] car [illegible] speed was [illegible] which was [illegible] the [illegible] chairman of [illegible] A. A. A. racing board will take the [illegible] of determining what [illegible] the [illegible] would [illegible] the entries [illegible] from freak or other [illegible].

[illegible] that some arrangements [illegible] so-called "freaks" [illegible] by themselves and prevented from competing with other racing [illegible]. This can readily be done [illegible] two classes for motive power, one for steam and the other for gasoline. [illegible] is done [illegible] contention [illegible] gasoline [illegible] has heretofore been [illegible] short sprints the steamer was [illegible] gas [illegible] to fear [illegible].

MORA ROADSTER RACY LOOKING

H. F. Whiting of the Motor Mart, agent for the Mora roadster and the Mora tourer, has been kept busy since his 1907 roadster arrived, giving demonstrations in Eastern Massachusetts. Mr. Whiting says the interest shown in the roadster far exceeds his expectations and the outlook points to a very successful season for this high-[illegible] roadster.

The Mora roadster is a four-cylinder, twenty-four horsepower, shaft-driven runabout with sliding gear transmission, three speeds forward and one reverse, with [illegible] and has a wheel base of ninety-eight inches. It is a particularly racy looking car, and is intended principally for use as a two-passenger car, but to accommodate those who occasionally may desire to carry more than two the body is so designed that the torpedo back may be removed from the roadster and a surrey seat substituted.

FRENCH PAPER PRAISES DRIVER

Copies of L'Auto, the well-known French automobile daily, which have just arrived in this country, have this to say of a [illegible] driver, who has [illegible] self more popular with the American public:

"[illegible] LeBlon will leave America carrying [illegible] the sympathy and admiration of every one. He is a mechanician without [illegible] a driver equal to the best, and a sportsman in every sense of the word. He drove a splendid race. The Thomas is a great machine, but with all of LeBlon's [illegible] courage and exceptional skill [illegible] could not make a round better than twenty-nine minutes, which wasn't [illegible] to win because his [illegible] and [illegible] tires were far from the equal of those of the French, Italian and German cars."

RIVAL AUTO SHOWS IN NEW YORK

New York is promised an interesting time with its two shows, as the independent makers in booming their December exhibit are disposed to do what they can to detract from the show in Madison Square Garden under the auspices of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers, and both sides are aggressive. The [illegible] under the protection of the Automobile Club of America, [illegible] from [illegible] the regular [illegible] show [illegible] are advertising their affair as the [illegible] seventh [illegible] formerly held in the Garden, [illegible] of [illegible], united under the Selden patent, advertise theirs as the national show of the old makers in the Garden now [illegible]. Each side has [illegible] ground for its argument, but the [illegible] confusing to the newer element [illegible] motoring world.

WHITE STEAMER WINS FIRST PRIZE

The results of the Town Motor Carriage competition held October 15, 16 and 17 by the Automobile Club of Great Britain and Ireland have just been announced, and have been cabled to this country. The highest award, a gold [illegible] was made to the White steamer. This was the first competition of the kind ever held and was conducted with [illegible] British thoroughness under the [illegible] of a competent technical [illegible]. The object of the competition, as stated by the club, was "to show [illegible] different types of self-propelled [illegible] for town work."

Cadillac

We claim for the 1907 four-cylinder 30-35 horse power Cadillac, exceptional simplicity, reliability, and low cost of maintenance. We feel warranted in making this statement and consider it conservative, in view of the fact that we have built fourteen thousand automobiles in the past five years which have become famous by possessing these qualities, and which have made the Cadillac Motor Car Company the largest manufacturer of automobiles in the world.

Henry Fosdick Co. Has Brightest of Prospects

Among the local automobile establishments none is better known than is the Harry Fosdick Company, which since its establishment somewhat over a year ago, has been prominent in local affairs. It has handled throughout a strictly high grade line of goods and has been eminently successful with the famous Pope and other Pope cars which formed its stock in trade last season.

This year it starts out in business with [illegible] bright prospects, [illegible] agency for the [illegible] which is as well known as any car in the land. The combination of this company and the Thomas is a particularly strong one, but [illegible] the results of the [illegible] acquisition of the [illegible] leaders [illegible] their [illegible] highest grade of goods.

Well Known Locally.

The members of the company are all well and popularly known in this section. For several years Harry Fosdick handled the local affairs of the Winton, and did so in an excellent manner. When he severed his connection with that concern he organized the Harry Fosdick Company, and that it has met with the success it warranted was due entirely to the energy and persistent [illegible] of each and every member of the firm. A few months ago and the trade at large was wondering what this firm would do for the coming season. In [illegible] it became known that the [illegible] above mentioned would become the stock in trade of the company. Its large establishment on Stanhope street is none too great to accommodate [illegible] of the business [illegible] the Motor Mart [illegible] acknowledged [illegible].

While Mr. Fosdick is known throughout the length and breadth of this country his two partners, the Robbins brothers, have also [illegible] Previous to [illegible] these two [illegible] lucrative automobile business in Lynn, with Boston headquarters in the Motor Mart. The bringing together of these [illegible] was considered as one of the things that could possibly have occurred [illegible] have [illegible] the judgment of the [illegible].

Want to See New Models.

Of course naturally since the arrival of both models of the Thomas cars, a great deal of interest has been displayed in them [illegible] and the [illegible] has been kept at [illegible] attention [illegible] demonstrations and [illegible] orders.

[illegible] powerful and [illegible] cent's cylinder Parker [illegible] aboard on the high road [illegible] pace [illegible] on [illegible] the safety depends [illegible] which is a knowledge [illegible] in this section.

On Friday Messrs. Fosdick and Robbins, accompanied by several of their friends, went out for a spin in the big fellow, with the results as depicted in the accompanying illustration. This shows the [illegible] of a little work on one of the boulevards and speaks volumes. At the wheel of the big car is Hilliard, the man who climbed Mt. Washington in record time and who is known as a daring driver.

Both models of the Thomas are now here and are doing no end of good work in their trips around the country.

Insurance on Exhibits in New York Shows

Following its usual plan of security benefits for its members whenever possible, the American Motor Car Association has made an arrangement by which its members who exhibit at the Grand Central Palace show in New York, December 1 to 8, will receive a [illegible] in the matter of fire insurance. The association has taken a blanket [illegible] of companies sufficient to cover the exhibits of [illegible] its members who will receive a special association rate. The insurance rate at Grand Central Palace in cases of this sort is three per cent, while at the Madison Square Garden it is four per cent. Of course these rates will vary when a great deal of insurance is placed on exhibits in the building.

The [illegible] of the pitching distance may be taken up for discussion at the annual National [illegible] but it is not thought that the distance will be changed.

COST LESS THAN A CENT A MILE TO RUN AUTO.

BY DUNCAN CURRY.

New York, Nov. 10.—Probably the most interesting event of the week in automobile circles was the election day races at the Empire City track near Yonkers, which drew nearly 4,000 spectators, and some motor car races near Newark, N. J., which drew an assemblage close to 10,000 people.

At the Empire track the feature of the day was a 100-mile race, with seven starters. They included Montague Roberts, in a sixty horsepower Thomas; William McDonald, in a forty horsepower Thomas; C. H. [illegible] with a thirty horsepower American; [illegible] with a forty-five horsepower Peerless; Guy Vaughan, in a thirty horsepower Stearns; C. G. Embleton, with a [illegible] horsepower Packard and [illegible] a forty-five horsepower Columbia.

Neither the Mathewson, the Olds nor the [illegible] which won last week's century, took part in the race, and as they displayed an important part in the contest the affair developed into a procession, the Packard [illegible] winning rather easily in 2 hours 55 seconds, with the Peerless car second in 2 hours 6 minutes 57 seconds and the Stearns car, probably the fastest of the [illegible] in third place in 2 hours 10 minutes [illegible].

Another interesting feature of the day was the debut of two new [illegible] cars, the Rolls-Royce, a British production, and a Westinghouse car from France. The Royce car, which was of twenty horsepower, was driven by the Hon. C. S. Rolls, and made a record of 5 minutes 51 4-5 seconds for five miles.

In the race of the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club at Waverly Park, Newark, N. J., the best performance of the day was made by Ernest Keeler in his [illegible] horsepower Vanderbilt Cupper, which [illegible] a new record of 6 minutes 7 1-5 seconds for five miles over the half mile track. [illegible] afterward captured the ten mile free-for-all in 1 hour 12 minutes 41 seconds, beating a Packard and a Locomobile.

A Pope-Hartford driven by M. H. Ap[illegible] and H. J. Koehler in his Buick car carried off most of the events.

[illegible] interesting contribution to the data [illegible] the relative cost of motoring [illegible] travelling [illegible] by a prominent Pittsburg [illegible] His careful account, tabulated by himself, was made on a trip from New York to Boston and return by a different route, 487 miles in all. His machine was a twelve horsepower Autocar runabout, which has long been noted for reliable road work [illegible] traveling companion [illegible].

The 487 miles were covered in forty [illegible] hours and two minute actual [illegible] of an average speed of 15.28 [illegible] per hour. The average cost per [illegible] of each of the two passengers was 15.1-10 of one cent. This includes all [illegible] connected with the machine, gas, [illegible] repairs [illegible] and even the fastening of the license [illegible].

Inasmuch as the usual charge on railroads is from 2 to 3 cents per mile, the advantage of cheapness is shown by this [illegible] with the motor car, which averages less than half this amount. In making his table of expenses the Pittsburg [illegible] the [illegible] of many [illegible] which have been held [illegible] experimental runs for the same purpose. His test is held to be even more valuable, as he drove and cared for his own car without the assistance of a trained chauffeur.

BUSY DAYS FOR C. S. HENSHAW

C. S. Henshaw, the Haynes New England representative, is extremely busy these days. When he is not on the road closing contracts with dealers the chances are that you will find him talking to some prospective purchaser, or his attention is taken up with [illegible] his new house [illegible] private garage that he is building in Belmont near the famous Oakley and Riding and Driving Clubs.

Kaiser Objects to Motor Terms in Foreign Tongue

Word comes from Germany that the Kaiser has declared war on international automobile terminology, and has decided that so far as his own country is concerned the language of motordom shall be "made in Germany." He has caused an intimation to go forth that hereafter there shall be no such functionaries as [illegible] in the [illegible] shall be [illegible] "agentfuehrer" [illegible] levers, and the expectation is [illegible] "chassis" and "tonneau" [illegible] the chauffeur into oblivion. Despite the modern German's fondness for words of foreign origin, especially from English and French, the Kaiser is the recipient of widespread praise for his efforts to purify the German tongue of foreign corruptions. It has long been one of his hobbies to accomplish this. His Majesty recently gave a fresh evidence of his desire in this direction by commanding that French terms should be struck out of the military code, substituting understandable German idioms. Under the new automobile language the Kaiser's chief automobile driver must struggle through life as best he may under the title of "oberhofwagenfuehrer."

MANUFACTURERS ELECT OFFICERS

New York, Nov. 10.—The annual meeting [illegible] of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers was held Wednesday at the association's [illegible] No. 7 East [illegible] street. [illegible] the most important business transacted being the [illegible] of the show committee of the seventh national exhibition, to be held at Madison Square Garden January 12-19, and the election of officers for the ensuing year.

The following officers were elected: President, Charles Clifton, George N. Pierce Company; vice-president, Thomas Henderson, Winton M. C. Company; treasurer, H. H. Franklin, H. H. Franklin Manufacturing Company; secretary, L. H. Kittredge, Peerless M. C. Company. The executive committee elected was: R. E. Smith, Olds Motor Works; S. T. Davis, Jr., Locomobile Company of America; M. J. Budlong, Electric Vehicle Company; William E. Metzger, [illegible] Motor Company; E. H. [illegible], Knox Auto Company.

ANTI-FREEZING MIXTURE.

Now approaches the season when all cars in this section, whether they have water jackets or not, will be air-cooled. To prevent too much air cooling of water in the radiator a solution of one-third wood alcohol or glycerine, either one, and two-thirds water is an anti-freezing mixture that is effective down to 10 degrees [illegible].

VISITORS CARELESS IN SALESROOMS

Automobile salesmen are forced to keep a strict watch on visitors to big salesrooms, as so many visitors have a bad habit of handling highly finished work so carelessly that the surface is very often marred. An instance of this was seen recently at a New York store. Some malicious or extremely careless person had scratched the lower panel in one of the doors of a big limousine so badly that the car had to be sent back to the body builders to be fixed up before it could be delivered to the owner. No one knew how it had been done, as it appeared as if the marks had been made by someone scraping the surface with a finger ring that held a diamond or other hard stone set in it.

AS THE BOY SAW IT.

Two small boys were gaping at the [illegible] of a car [illegible] standing on the street with its hood raised while the [illegible] was making some adjustments [illegible] were over an argument as to the [illegible] of the fan in front of the engine. Finally one of them solved it to his satisfaction and triumphantly declared to his chum that it was a propeller which was used to make the car run backward. The chauffeur grinned and told the youngster that he would be an inventor some day.

FORD CO. MAKING GREAT FACTORY RECORD.

An automobile every fourteen minutes is the world's factory record and it is now held by the Ford Motor Company. High water mark in the production of four-cylinder Ford runabouts was reached last week when the average daily output of four-cylinder Ford runabouts was reached [illegible] week when the average daily output of the Model N factory was increased from [illegible] that he would build these cars in [illegible] ten thousand and at the rate of one hundred cars per day. That this was [illegible] boast is shown by the fact that an output of forty-two cars per day has already been reached and the daily capacity [illegible] increased as fast as [illegible] placed and organized to their [illegible]. Making automobiles like [illegible] lines is the [illegible] and [illegible] at great American industry was developed along the lines of accurate workmanship and special materials.

HAYNES RACER IS NOW IN NEW YORK

The Haynes Vanderbilt car, having covered every New England town of importance, is now in New York and will shortly continue on its long journey, passing through Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington on its way West. At every stopping place the car is almost immediately surrounded by a curious crowd varying in size from fifty to 200 people.

Naturally a number of questions are always fired at the driver by the most interested. In Portland, Me., last week, one asked how many motors the car had to attain such a terrific speed in the Vanderbilt Cup. Another wanted to know [illegible] tires are filled with quicksilver so the wheels would turn faster, and a third [illegible] thought the [illegible] was the [illegible] attached a magnet which was used in connection with the telegraph wires strung along the course.

ENGINE VIBRATION

Engine vibration [illegible] of four and six cylinder [illegible] is the theme to be discussed by [illegible] factory superintendents of [illegible] and members of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers at their monthly meeting in December.

dicted and that was expected to help Harvard not a little against her light opponents was [illegible] in evidence. Though the turf was a bit soft it was of no advantage to the Crimson.

TEAMS FELT THEIR WAY.

The new [illegible] observed for the first time by thousands of the spectators, and [illegible] the whole, to judge by the comments [illegible] of the grounds, [illegible] game [illegible] and inaction—[illegible] on [illegible] on the part of Harvard [illegible] rations as to the best [illegible] and the whole machine [illegible] the matter of running [illegible] of the plays the [illegible] it was [illegible] of course, the new [illegible] to a great degree.

[illegible] the Harvard attack [illegible] in efforts at [illegible] while there was a [illegible] or a hesitancy that [illegible].

The Indians [illegible] had no chance to [illegible] good enough [illegible] offered. [illegible] the Indians were expected [illegible]. Nearly [illegible] before the [illegible] only gains they made were by the running back of punts. In this department of the game [illegible]. Nearly always their back field men would hesitate before [illegible] the forward movement and it was only when Harvard missed a tackle that the Redskins were able to advance.

BOOTED OVER THE LINE.

Of kicking there was a plenty. Punts, quarterback kicks and on-side kicks followed each other with bewildering rapidity. In the punting line there was more done than one would see in two games of last year's variety. The Indians did more of the old time punting than Harvard, because they had to. Mount Pleasant and Burr were the opposing boot artists, and the honors were about even. Burr was slow in getting the ball away, but he was in a position to take his own time, as no Indian could ever get through Harvard's line to block.

In short kicks Harvard took the initiative, the Redmen evidently being afraid to try much in this line. Punting was their long suit. Except when the ball was booted into Harvard territory, the play was almost entirely on the ground defended by the Carlisle men. Although no score was made in the first half Harvard's line was never in danger, while on the other hand the Indian goal was threatened two or three times.

The nearest Carlisle came to scoring was in the middle of the first half. From his 45-yard line Mount Pleasant booted the ball far and high. It came [illegible] Harvard's 15-yard line over the heads of Starr and Newhall. Exendine, the Indian captain, was there by the time the ball struck the ground, and [illegible] booted it over the [illegible] start for the pigskin, but Newhall was there ahead of him.

Harvard won the toss and elected the Indians to kick off. Newhall made the catch and ran 12 yards before being dumped.

On a criss-cross play Lockwood was thrown back for an 8-yard loss by a beautiful tackle of Captain Exendine when the Harvard man was ready to make a break for the left end. Burr punted and Mount Pleasant returned the ball the same way after one rush was made of [illegible].

Starr made a nice runback of [illegible] yards. Harvard lost five yards for [illegible] play, and then the Indians paid the penalty. Wendell went through centre with the whole Harvard team at his back for [illegible] yards. On the next rush Harvard fumbled and a [illegible] scramble [illegible] at a kick going to the Indians' 50-yard line when Lincoln made an on-side kick.

[illegible] first down. By the aid of [illegible] punts Newhall [illegible] yards to [illegible] interference [illegible] five yards [illegible] Starr made two [illegible] 40-yard line went [illegible] forward pass was [illegible] the [illegible] middle [illegible] Exendine [illegible].

BALL BEHIND GOAL LINE.

[illegible] on their 45 [illegible] Mt. Pleasant sent a long spiral of [illegible] yards [illegible] and trying to send it around [illegible] made a plunge at [illegible] and the ball, the latter [illegible] Newhall made his [illegible].

Harvard [illegible] from the 25-yard line and [illegible] got a [illegible] twelve [illegible] yards [illegible] a drop kick from [illegible] failed [illegible] forty-five [illegible] dians got [illegible] when [illegible] a forward pass [illegible].

After [illegible] and the ball on her [illegible] and Osborne, who [illegible] called it on a fumble on the Indians 45-yard line. Rushes by Wendell through the centre of the line took the ball to the Indians' 25-yard line. A five-yard penalty and Lockwood's loss put the team back eight yards, and Newhall tried a short kick.

There was little change in the team when they came on the field for the second half. [illegible] was replaced by Fraser, while the Indians remained intact, DuBois having gone in for Laroque at guard earlier in the game.

15 YARDS ON HARVARD LINE.

Burr kicked and the ball was run back eighteen yards because the Harvard men were slow in getting down the field. By a series of fierce rushes in which several men were used in carrying the ball from a tackle to quarterback, the Indians got twenty yards, when they were obliged to punt.

Burr's long return was fumbled, and McDonald and Pierce were on the oval like a flash on the Indians' thirty-six-yard line. A beautiful forward pass, Newhall to McDonald, was good for fifteen yards. Interference with the centre got five more. Wendell, in a couple of rushes, made the twelve-yard mark when Newhall fumbled as he was about to make a forward pass, and the ball belonged to the Indians on their twenty-yard line.

Mount Pleasant made a fifty-yard punt, and on the first rush Wendell made his long run, which paved the way for the touchdown.

There was little rushing done for the rest of the half, both teams playing cautiously and kicking at every opportunity. The summary:

INDIAN COACHES HAD HOPED FOR AT LEAST A TIE SCORE

By Head Coach Bemus Pierce.

But for one fumble I think the score would have been 0 to 0. Wendell was enabled to go through our line immediately after on account of this.

We did as well as we really expected, although we hoped to score at least once. It isn't very often that Libby slips up when he is within fifty yards of the opponent's goal line, and we were depending on his boot to give us a score. At the outset of the game it didn't look as though we were going to be beaten. Our backs had some [illegible] keeping their feet [illegible] the offence and defence [illegible] for Carlisle. She played better than can be reasonably expected of a light team on a field in the condition that the Stadium was in to-day. The Harvard line is about the strongest we have been up against this season, and their back field is a pretty slippery problem for any team to tackle.

By Coach Carl Flanders.

I do not believe Harvard would have scored had not Hunt got injured. He was pretty well used up when he went into the fire, and he was a weak point for the time being in our line. Wendell went through the gap opened up through this portion of the line for his run and found the Indian centre unable to withstand the Harvard interference.

By Captain Exendine.

I expected we would get at least an even break to-day, perhaps at one time during the afternoon I expected that we would do even better than that. After the first few minutes of play it looked to me as though we had them well started on our style of play, but that was before our defence was tried out. Then at times they were too [illegible] for us. The [illegible] years [illegible]. When [illegible] the best that [illegible] could [illegible] expect. It was [illegible] game all through, and an enjoyable one.

By Coach Frank Hudson of Carlisle.

It looked like a pretty good game to me all told. We had a few doubts [illegible] as to the outcome and [illegible] reasonable to expect that we could hold the Harvard line if the field was wet on account of their great weight. I think personally our boys played very creditably [illegible] were not able to work [illegible] we have been using [illegible] lately. A couple of the ideas of [illegible] seemed to take pretty well and we managed to get by for a few yards by one or two others.

DORCHESTER DEFEATED.

Dorchester High added another defeat to her already long string yesterday afternoon on the Dunbar avenue grounds, Dorchester, Everett High winning by putting up a snappy game, 17 to 11.

WILKESBRINO HAS SHARP RIVAL IN BUNKER HILL.

Another boost to the claims of Wilkesbrino being the real, live champion of the Franklin Field Speedway was given him yesterday in the weekly matinee of the Dorchester Driving Club through securing the blue ribbon over Charlena in hand style.

All aspirants for the distinction, however, must be on the alert from now on or the question of the "boss of the speedway" will be decided in favor of Bunker Hill. The offhand way that he took Captain Hall into camp made plain his superiority over all except possibly the very top-notchers. He paced one of the heats in the fast time of thirty-one seconds without turning a hair, and pulled up some thirty yards from the finish. It certainly looks like "hail to the king" in Bunker Hill.

Fred Bellows was so happy when the racing was concluded it was indeed hard to control him, for with his two pacing mares he headed the summaries of their respective events. Helgamite tramped on Hazelwood after dropping the initial heat, while Louis D. pulled off a creditable victory against Hazel D. and Ornament in five severely contested heats.

The olive branch of harmony swings again over the club, past understandings between the members having been adjusted to the satisfaction of the warring factions. Through this S. Walter Wales once more filled the official position of starting judge. He had a [illegible] afternoon getting off fourteen races, which required fifty-three heats to decide [illegible]. Thirty-two starters took the word in all of the events. It was the biggest matinee the club has held during the year. Summary:

AMHERST "AGGIES" LOSE TO TUFTS 28 TO 0.

Medford, Nov. 10.—The Amherst "Aggies" were handed an overwhelming defeat by Tufts on Tufts Oval this afternoon by the score of twenty-eight to nothing. Tufts made the first touchdown and goal within three minutes after play started. Two other touchdowns were made in the first half, no goals resulting.

Tufts kicked off to Amherst and failed to gain the required distance. On the next play Greene received the punted ball and carried it twenty yards. Then [illegible] made an end run of forty yards and Peterson, in two spectacular plays, netted another forty yards and placed the ball on Amherst's three-yard line. Sheehy was then sent over for the first touchdown.

Tufts kicked off and the ball was received by Cobb, who made some of the most spectacular dodging yet seen on the Oval.

Tufts men were playing a whirlwind game and held their opponents for downs.

A succession of punts followed the next kick-off, in which "Carl" Jones had the best of it. The half ended with the ball in Amherst's possession, about to make a try for a goal from field.

The second half was repetition of the first, end runs and trick plays netting big gains for Tufts. Peterson, who was playing a wonderful game, was sent over the line for two more touchdowns.

SOMERVILLE LOST TO LOWELL TEX.

Lowell Textile defeated Somerville High on Broadway Field, Somerville, yesterday afternoon, making one touchdown in the second half after the fiercest playing Somerville has seen this year. Textile greatly outweighed Somerville, and their burly fullback, Stursberg, was hurled against the school line for many gains. Somerville's only chance [illegible] was in the first half, when Sharry made a handsome run around Prescott for fifty yards and for what seemed a touchdown, but he was sent back fifteen yards to where it was decided he ran outside.

For Somerville, Jarvis and Sharry proved gainers, and Serlyn and Garland at end were in the game hard. Somerville's captain and two other regular men were out of the game on account of minor injuries in practice. Score, Textile, 6, Somerville, 0.

SALEM BEATS QUINCY.

Salem, Mass., Nov. 10.—Salem High defeated Quincy High here to-day, 5 to 0. The visitors held Salem three times when within the five-yard line. Mulligan, Edwards, Hurley, [illegible] and Nichols excelled.

CHARLES WALSH WINS MATCH AT B. A. A. TOURNAMENT.

The semi-final and the final rounds in the B. A. A. amateur boxing tournament were held in the gymnasium last night.

The feature of the 105 pound division was the victory of Charley Walsh, a younger brother of Jimmy Walsh, the champion bantam. He won his first watch and was as tickled as if it had been a title. He met a tough boy in the final bout in Joseph Galvin of Somerville, who put him down with a right hand in the first round. Walsh showed a snappy left but was lacking any power in his swings.

Angus McDougal, the New England champion, won out in the 105 pound class easily and Tommy Rawson, another champ, won the watch in the 125 pound section. A good match resulted in the 135 pound class between Tom Foley of South Boston and Sam McDougal of Roxbury, which the former won after some clever work. The summaries:

Hillman Made a New Record for 300 Yards At A. A. U. Games

New York, Nov. 10.—The initial international indoor and field championships of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States which began last night in the Madison Square Garden were wound up to-night to the entire satisfaction of every body interested.

The feature of last night's events was the defeat of Melvin W. Sheppard, America's crack half-mile runner, by E. B. Parsons, of Yale, who is the intercollegiate champion runner at a half-mile. These two met in a bunch of half a dozen, including Paul Pilgrim, the Olympic champion, but Parsons always had the foot of the party, and practically ran Sheppard off his feet. Sheppard quit in the last sixty yards and failed to finish in the first hour.

Harry Hillman made a new world's record for 300 yards in 36 2-5 seconds.

GORHAMS WIN EASILY.

Providence, Nov. 10.—It was all Gorham's in the soccer game to-day and the Fall River Rovers were roundly trounced. The winners played a snappy and accurate passing game and their forwards fairly swept the visitors off their feet by the fierce onslaught. The score was Gorhams, 7; Rovers, 1.

A Piano Sale here is always a sacrifice, always a bargain sale, always a mark-down sale. The very nature of business, as the public know, is one of sacrifice. The business here is not conducted like the business of a regular Piano store down town, where they are expected to make a profit on each piano—where they get their profit DIRECTLY out of the sale of pianos. We don't let any piano loaf around on the floor of the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms—it comes in in DUE TIME, a sacrifice tag is clapped on to it, be it high grade, low grade or middle grade, and it is sold to the first man or woman who wants it, for the price marked on the tag—not a cent more or less. The selling price is made on the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms' "Expense percentage" basis and is figured to let the accounts out clean and clear without regard to profit—so you can see easily by this statement how these sales must necessarily be sacrifices.

The Piano Trust is Trying to Organize the Piano Teachers Against Us

You well know by this time, if [illegible] been reading our announcements, that the Piano Trust [illegible] been fighting us all along the [illegible] and this same Trust has been [illegible] a good licking by us, and [illegible] are still cutting the very life [illegible] of their high piano prices and [illegible] continue to do so.

We Will Give 3 Months' Piano Lessons Free.

This is our move against the Piano Trust. If you buy your Piano from [illegible] this week we will give you [illegible] Three Months' Piano Lessons Free. It will be the finest Piano [illegible] that money can procure.

BANKWRECKER FREE TO BEGIN LIFE ANEW

Concord, N. H., Nov. 10.—John P. Goggin, the Nashua bank-wrecker, was met at the gate when released by pardon from prison to-day by his wife and their two daughters, his father and a sister, Miss Nellie Goggin of Manchester. Goggin will go to the far West, where he has been offered a position.

Goggin was sentenced to an indeterminate sentence of from four to seven years, but he is released on a pardon from the Governor. There has always been a feeling that, although Goggin pleaded guilty to falsifying the accounts of the Nashua Loan and Trust Company, of which he was cashier, he was merely a tool for more guilty persons.

KENTUCKY FINANCEE OF GEORGE W. CABLE, AUTHOR-LECTURER

SOCIETY PREPARING TO GREET BRIDE OF G. W. CABLE.

Boston literary society is preparing to welcome here Miss Eva C. Stevenson, Kentucky heiress and club woman, when she becomes the bride of George W. Cable, the author and lecturer, who for years has made Northampton, Mass., his home. The bride-to-be is about fifty years old and ten years the junior of Mr. Cable. He met her first when he read from his own works before the Woman's Club of Central Kentucky, of which she is president. He saw a tall, stately woman, whose wealth of brown hair is sprinkled with gray, and was immediately attracted by a grace of mind and bearing which makes her conspicuous in any company.

Mr. Cable was afterward entertained at her home in Lexington, and his admiration for his hostess was reflected in her large blue eyes. She was thoroughly familiar with his works, and much impressed by his genius before they ever met. Engagements to read before other societies in the South enabled him to visit Lexington often and court the fair Southern woman.

It is understood that the marriage will take place at the home of Miss Stevenson's sister in Philadelphia. She has disposed of her real estate in Lexington, including the Woman's Club building, which she owned. Her mother died recently, but her father is alive and is a Grant County, Ky., planter.

WOMEN WORK TO MAKE W. R. C. FAIR BIG SUCCESS

Unique Features Planned for Great G. A. R. Event in Paul Revere Hall—State Corps to Be Largely Represented

Everything is now in readiness for the Fair of the Women's Relief Corps, Department of Massachusetts, G. A. R., which begins to-morrow evening and continues all of the week in Paul Revere Hall, Huntington avenue. Colonel J. Payson Bradley, Department Commander, will formally open the Fair at 8 o'clock, while Mrs. Alice Goddard, Department President, W. R. C., will preside at the exercises.

For many months local corps throughout the State have been working for its success. The Fair is in charge of a committee of nearly 100 members, in addition to the 175 corps presidents. Governor Guild and Colonel Bradley and staff of seventy-five or more officers will be among the special guests of the evening.

In the Great Cafe.

The great cafe of the Fair is to be in charge of Corps 40 of Everett. Luncheon and supper are to be served every day. The booth of the souvenir calendar committee promises to be an especially attractive feature. In connection with this there is to be a gypsy fortune teller's tent.

A large and handsomely framed portrait of Commander-in-Chief Blackmar, from the brush of Henry W. Berthrong, senior vice-commander of Post 30, Arlington, is to be presented to the Grand Army post receiving the largest number of votes.

Tuesday night is to be veterans' night. Commander Bradley and staff and every post in the State have been invited to be present. Posts 2, 7, 11, 15, 26, 92 and 139 will participate in the reception of colors, under the direction of Linus E. Clark, past commander of Post 11. Miss Marion P. Seabury of Waltham will sing "The Star Spangled Banner" during this ceremony.

Evenings' Entertainments.

Wednesday night is designated as "An Evening with Patriotic Associations." All of the patriotic orders have been invited to be present on that occasion. Readings will be given by Miss Grace Loker.

On Thursday evening the following are to appear: Miss Adah G. Currie, violin soloist; Miss Mary C. Browne, Southern melodies with banjo accompaniment; Miss Helen E. Howes, whistling soloist, and George A. Mulford, novel vocal imitations.

On Friday evening a women's orchestra will give a concert and on Saturday afternoon an entertainment for children is to be given, under the direction of Mrs. Dorcas H. Lyman by the Faneuil Orchestra and Miss Ruth Hickey.

LAST CHANCE
To buy COTTONWOOD COPPER COMPANY at the original ground floor price of ten cents per share—an advance of 25 per cent. in the price of this stock goes into effect Saturday, November 17th. Get your order in before that time. Office open Monday and Saturday night until 9 P. M. Call, write or wire. Do it now.
This is the age of electricity. Every extension of trolley, telephone, telegraph or electric light and power lines consumes copper. Never was there such a demand for Copper as now. Never were such strenuous efforts put forth to increase a production of Copper to meet the market demand. In the past year more Copper was mined than ever before in the history of the world, yet the market price of Copper steadily advanced the while, as premium for further explorations and discoveries.
America furnishes three-fifths of the Copper production of the entire world. In 1905 this continent supplied $150,000,000 worth of Copper. Montana ranked first with a production of $52,595,000; Arizona ranked second, with $39,035,000; Michigan third.
THE DIVIDENDS PAID FROM AMERICAN COPPER MINES LAST YEAR AMOUNTED TO MORE THAN HALF OF THE TOTAL DIVIDENDS PAID TO SHAREHOLDERS IN GOLD, SILVER, COPPER, LEAD AND ZINC MINES.
Six mines in Michigan paid over $15,000,000 in dividends. Four Copper mines in Arizona paid nearly $5,000,000 in dividends.
The greatest fortunes of to-day are being made in Copper mining. Senator W. A. Clark has made $100,000,000. John D. Rockefeller, who amassed a fortune in monopolizing the supply of Petroleum Oil, lately turned his attention to Copper mining and is making his millions earn more millions from the perpetual dividends paid by Copper.
So we say: IF YOU COULD DISCOVER AN INEXHAUSTIBLE DEPOSIT OF COPPER YOUR FORTUNE WOULD BE MADE.
Every discoverer has to have help to develop his property. You, if you were the discoverer, could not undertake unaided to work your property. It costs money and it takes confidence to make a mine. Every mining company which is incorporated proceeds upon the principle of distribution of risks, and offers a premium to ground-floor investors by selling stock below par.
IF YOU CAN'T BE A DISCOVERER, BE A DEVELOPER, FOR DEVELOPER AND DISCOVERER SHARE AND SHARE ALIKE.
We believe that there are enough intelligent readers of this paper, each of whom has a little money which he or she can spare, to take up this enterprise and carry it to successful conclusion by making one of the biggest Copper mines in Arizona. Let us have your co-operation and we will all make our fortunes.
Come with us and help make a mine. THIS COPPER MINE SHALL MAKE US ALL A FORTUNE. BUY EVERY SHARE YOU CAN AFFORD. DON'T DELAY. ACT TO-DAY.
Don't Dally and Defer. Dare to Invest Now!
He who dared to invest $100 in Greene Consolidated five years ago is now worth $8,700. He who did not hesitate to invest $100 in Calumet-Arizona four years ago is now worth $10,000. He who grabbed the first chance to invest $100 in United Verde in 1897 is now worth $30,000 by that venture.

LOCATION
In Arizona, Yavapai County.
Five or six miles south of Prescott.
Six claims, 4 of ore, 2 of timber.
The main claims are the Cottonwood, Golden Chief, Admiral and Turner.
Immense amount of timber on the ground; sufficient to last for all mining and milling purposes for years.
Water supply adequate for all present and future purposes. Groom Creek runs only a few rods from the property. Good wagon roads.
The company has a bond on 160 acres patented land adjoining this group. These 160 acres contain more than the bond calls for in wood and timber alone. Veins from the Cottonwood Group also cross this ranch.
DEVELOPMENT
Cottonwood has a grassroot tunnel driven in on the ore vein a distance of over 100 feet. From 4 feet to 12 feet of ore is exposed in the tunnel. A crosscut driven at 46 feet opens up 12 feet of ore, which will assay at least $10 per ton. No walls were found at this point, which proves the ledge to be much wider. Ore milled from this tunnel and from a shaft on this vein, without sorting, went about $20 per ton—plated, $6; concentrated, $8, while not less than $5 to $8 was lost in tailings, as the mill was old.
A 30-foot shaft, about 70 feet from the deep shaft, which is 30 feet from the mouth of the grassroot tunnel, was sunk to cut the ledge, and showed gold ore as high as $200 per ton. There was too much water to go further without machinery.
Cottonwood ore in places carries high in copper, silver, lead and iron, besides the gold value. The ore is a sulphide right on the surface. Five tons from the big tunnel shipped to the Val Verde smelter went $31 per ton in gold. We have the smelter report to show for this shipment.
Cottonwood ledge crops out on the surface very strong for a distance of 2,000 feet or more. Croppings are to 15 feet in width in many places. Ore on the surface assays well.
Golden Chief has a 40 foot shaft. The ore vein is narrow on the surface, but the ore is very rich, going about $40 to the ton to a depth of 25 feet. In the bottom of the shaft the ore is wide, but does not run over $4 or $5. All experts say that within a short distance further the values will be again encountered. The smelter returns prove that this statement is under-estimated, as ore went higher by actual smelting. The ore in Golden Chief has not been stoped out at all. It can be taken out and shipped at small expense.
Admiral, or copper claim, has been opened by a crosscut 70 feet to cut the ledge. A drift was then run in on the ore for a distance of 150 feet. The ore vein is continuous for this distance. As this working is near the apex of a sharp little hill, and very near the surface, the ore body is only from 6 to 16 inches in width. It carries nearly 8 per cent of copper, with some gold and silver. Assays from places show $17 ore. Other assays show much better.
A winze in the tunnel about twenty feet from where the crosscut struck the ledge was sunk to a depth of 47 feet. Ore was found all of the way. At twenty feet or so we struck very high grade copper ore, carrying over 20 per cent copper, together with gold and silver values. This streak of high grade copper is not over 4 inches wide, but the ore on both sides is very good. A goodly lot of this high grade ore could soon be extracted from this point. Shipments of $80 to $100 ore could easily be made to the smelter.
The copper ledge runs at right angle to the Cottonwood gold ledge. WHERE THE TWO LEDGES CROSS THERE IS EVERY INDICATION FOR A LARGE COPPER MINE. COPPER GOSSAN OUTCROPS WIDE AND STRONG ON THE SURFACE. Garnet croppings are also encountered at this point, which is at the apex of a rounding hill, about 1,500 feet from Cottonwood tunnel. A large basaltic dyke also crosses at this point. The tunnel is on this dyke for some distance. Basalt and copper gossan are the very best evidence of a strong copper vein.
Many mining experts, among them Mr. Gaffney, late of Colorado, but now in charge of the Charles J. George properties in Arizona, report most favorably on this entire property. Mr. Gaffney was positive in his statements that THERE EXISTS A GREAT COPPER DEPOSIT WHERE THESE VEINS CROSS EACH OTHER.
